A PREFACE . . .

No phoenix from the flames we rise now in a new place, decades behind our solid back and epic time ahead. And our great city, upon whose breast we rest, listening to its great heart beat now spreads its steel and shining wings all wide, and grows.
In it, to it, our rhythm is welded and flows.

Rhythms of caring, giving and taking mesh in a canticle of art, sport, and music, travel and trade.

Pestle pounds on mortar here in fruitful repetition:
ceaseless feet pounding streets in endless competition.

And these quick feet past us do often beat and are as often our own. Cement and mortar, steel beams and brick are bones and flesh to this, our town, and we do share them. On us all does God's grace flow; in it, with it, our rhythms are welded and grow.

THE REASONS:

Towers, spires, girders, the city builds. Lincoln Center, the Narrows Bridge, midtown Manhattan build. The Brooklyn Civic Center builds and St. Francis builds. Five years ago it was not even a dream; then it became a dream, soon a plan, and now a reality. St. Francis took new roots, without losing its old, when it moved to its new campus on Remsen Street. It was a bold step for the present but it was a bolder step toward the future. It was not merely a step from old buildings to new, from one area to another; it was a transformation and the formulation of a new image and purpose.

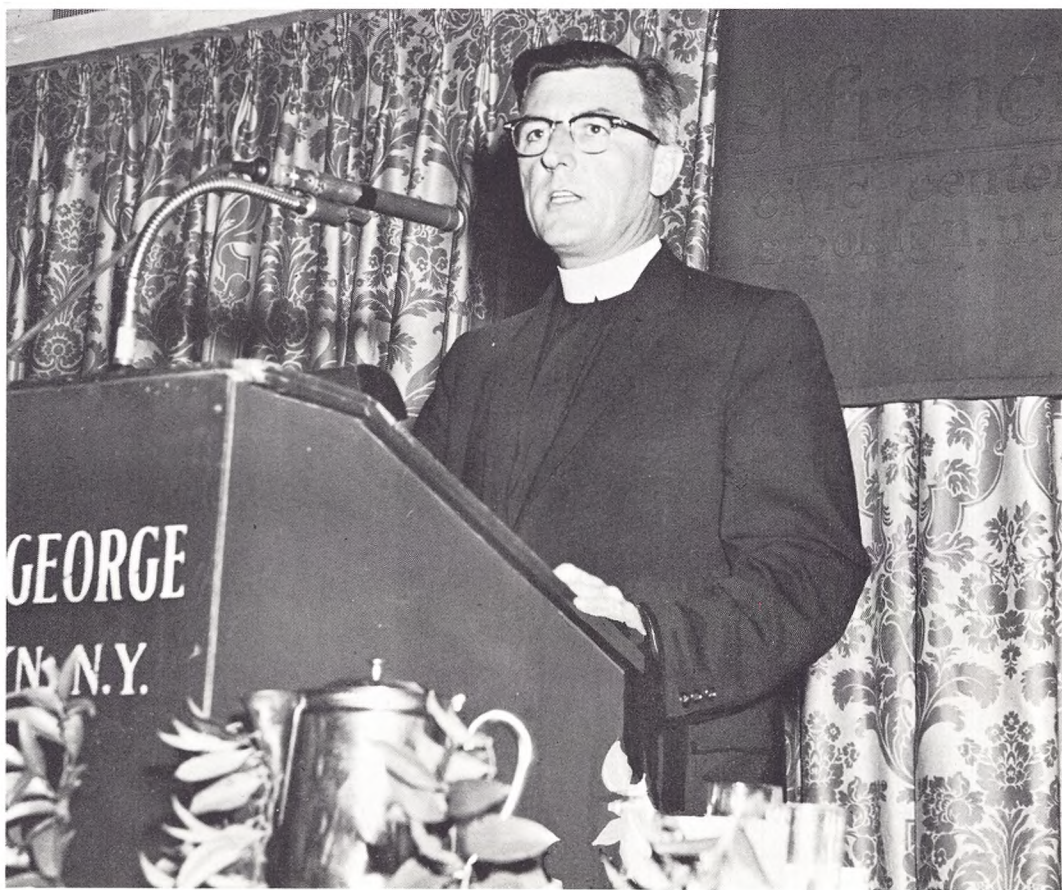

In a port so vast and ever building, it could not have been otherwise. The waterfront renewing: docks reconstructed, strengthened to increase trade. Downtown Brooklyn renewing: old houses remodelled, new houses sent skyward. St. Francis playing a part in each of these efforts: its Maritime Committee; its role in the Downtown Area Renewal Effort. How could we not renew ourselves?

The era of the urban commuter college is reaching its height. The day college is naturally suited to the great city and New York, with its vast museums and libraries and concert halls and theatres, is one of the great student cities of the world. New York is growing with the nation and with the world and we are growing with New York. We are growing for the city, to serve the city, to be the city, to meet the city where it needs us. We, the students, benefit from the metropolis, breathe in its vastness and take something of that vastness for ourselves. The metropolis educates us as much as our books, our professors, our acquaintances. It is our home and our teacher.

OBJECT OF THE LONG WAIT. These buildings now house the new liberal arts center, and the library with its fifty thousand volume collection.

Brother Urban Gonnoud,
O.S.F.
PRESIDENT

Brother Urban delivers his fifth address to the assembled alumni of St. Francis College. The occasion was their annual dinner held at the Hotel St. George. In his address, Brother contrasted old and new educational policies in the light of altered attitudes toward students, faculty, and curriculum.

Dear Graduates:

All the Franciscan Brothers and the entire lay staff join in an expression of sincere congratulations and best wishes to each of you for having successfully completed the rigid requirements for a baccalaureate degree from St. Francis College.

But more than this, we congratulate and thank you for the genuine interest and the unswerving loyalty that you consistently manifested during your four years at the College.

It is truly characteristic of your class that you have chosen to highlight the transfer of the College to the New Civic Center as the theme of your Yearbook. Though you will not be the direct beneficiaries of the new physical facilities, you have the maturity and insight to rejoice in the realization that the expansion and development of St. Francis will allow your College to better serve future generations of Franciscan students.

As you offer your pledge of life long devotion to Alma Mater, please accept the pledge of the faculty and administration, that we shall ever protect and encourage the finest traditions of St. Francis. We shall continue to offer the best possible undergraduate education in surroundings conducive to learning.

Our prayers and good wishes go with you as you enter the new world of graduate studies and business. I hope you will remember to pray for St. Francis College.

Sincerely yours,

Brother Urban O.S.F.

N.I.T. Bid for St. Francis Hoopsters

Great expectations and lingering doubts are the usual prelude to the opening of the basketball season. This year, under a haze of uncertainty and restlessness compounding the gloom of Butler Street, school spirit lay dormant until the last weeks of November. Maybe this would be it, our year, the Year of the Terrier. But maybe they wouldn't be tall enough. Maybe we would beat St. John's. And maybe we wouldn't. We would see.

On December first, coach Danny Lynch followed his men onto the floor of the 69th Regiment Armory, putting themselves to the test against the Hawks of Hunter College. Exhibiting an able offense and a spirited defense, the Terriers, paced by the scoring of Raflery and Kurowski, served their guests an 84-46 defeat. Four days later, Raflery led the offensive on the Brooklyn College squad with 19 points, while Kurowski, Alexander, and new-comer Ted Kotch also scored in double figures. The 70-52 spread in the score was enough to arouse the sleepers at Butler Street. The school began to take on a new complexion and a new pride. On December eighth, Alexander and Kotch, with 14 points apiece, led the Terrier attack against a strong Fairfield team. N.I.T. talk started on campus as the team was rated tops in the nation on defense. The driving, kinetic excitement of their play as they rolled over Bridgeport University 81-67 infected everyone. We began to say we; we beat them; we will beat them; we did beat them. We were alive with their spark and spirit and force as they tackled the classy Providence Friars. But despite the equally classy defensive play of Nash and Alexander, and the .722 offensive accuracy from the line, the 1960-61 N.I.T. Champions topped us, 68-67. An introduction to the bitterness of one-point defeat.

Christmas recess buoyed our spirit and the resumption of play produced victories over inept Adelphi and stamina-less Siena squads. Raftery rode steadily toward the thousand-point mark with contributions of 27 and 18 point respectively.

The Student Council bought a Terrier to serve as mascot, while a nationally prominent Villanova team came to the Armory. The tight Terrier defense, and Alexander's superb guarding of Wildcat star Wally Jones in particular, led to a tension filled 51-48 victory. We shook the roof as Eddie Lein sank a shot from near half court, enabling the Frankies to walk off at half-time with the lead. Shook the roof because now we knew that this was the year. The Year of the Terrier had arrived.

The next week, we swept over the teams of Pace College and Loyola College of Baltimore to 72-47 and 83-67 counterpoints with sharp-shooter Kurowski leading the attack, and found ourselves journeying to Hillcrest to meet our arch-rivals. An immensely tense and tight game culminated in a disastrous overtime struggle. The bitterness of a second one point loss, to an oft-beaten Redmen. The trip home through the drizzly rain, fields of mud and the depressing mist, to parties planned as victory celebrations. But there was a bright side. At midpoint in the season, the record stood at nine won and two lost. We had held the opposition to an average of only 54.6 points. We bounced back.

At Rose Hill the next week, the Fordham Rams seemed startled by the Terrier power. A shocked and highly partisan crowd saw the Frankies hold the "M&M" boys to a 17 point total, while scoring 59 points to the Rams' 46. Kotch scored 20 points, Kurowski 15, and Nash stole the show with a splashy game-ending behind-the-back two-pointer. The next game proved to be an unimpressive 61-57 victory over a mediocre C.C.N.Y. squad. An atmosphere of nonchalance prevailed as partisans fraternized and carnival music filled the Convent Avenue Gym during half-time.

The subsequent trip upstate resulted in a third one-point loss, this time to LeMoyne 65-64. The Syracuse rooters went all out to prove how partisan partisan could be. But the Terriers moved on to Albany, where, although the crowd was the same, a vendetta-driven Siena team handed us our first solid defeat, 56-51. Disappointed, shaken and angry, the Terriers returned to knock off an inept Queens College team by 83-54, with some colorful playing on the parts of Richie Marquadt and Jim Rishe. King's College succumbed next, 85-68.

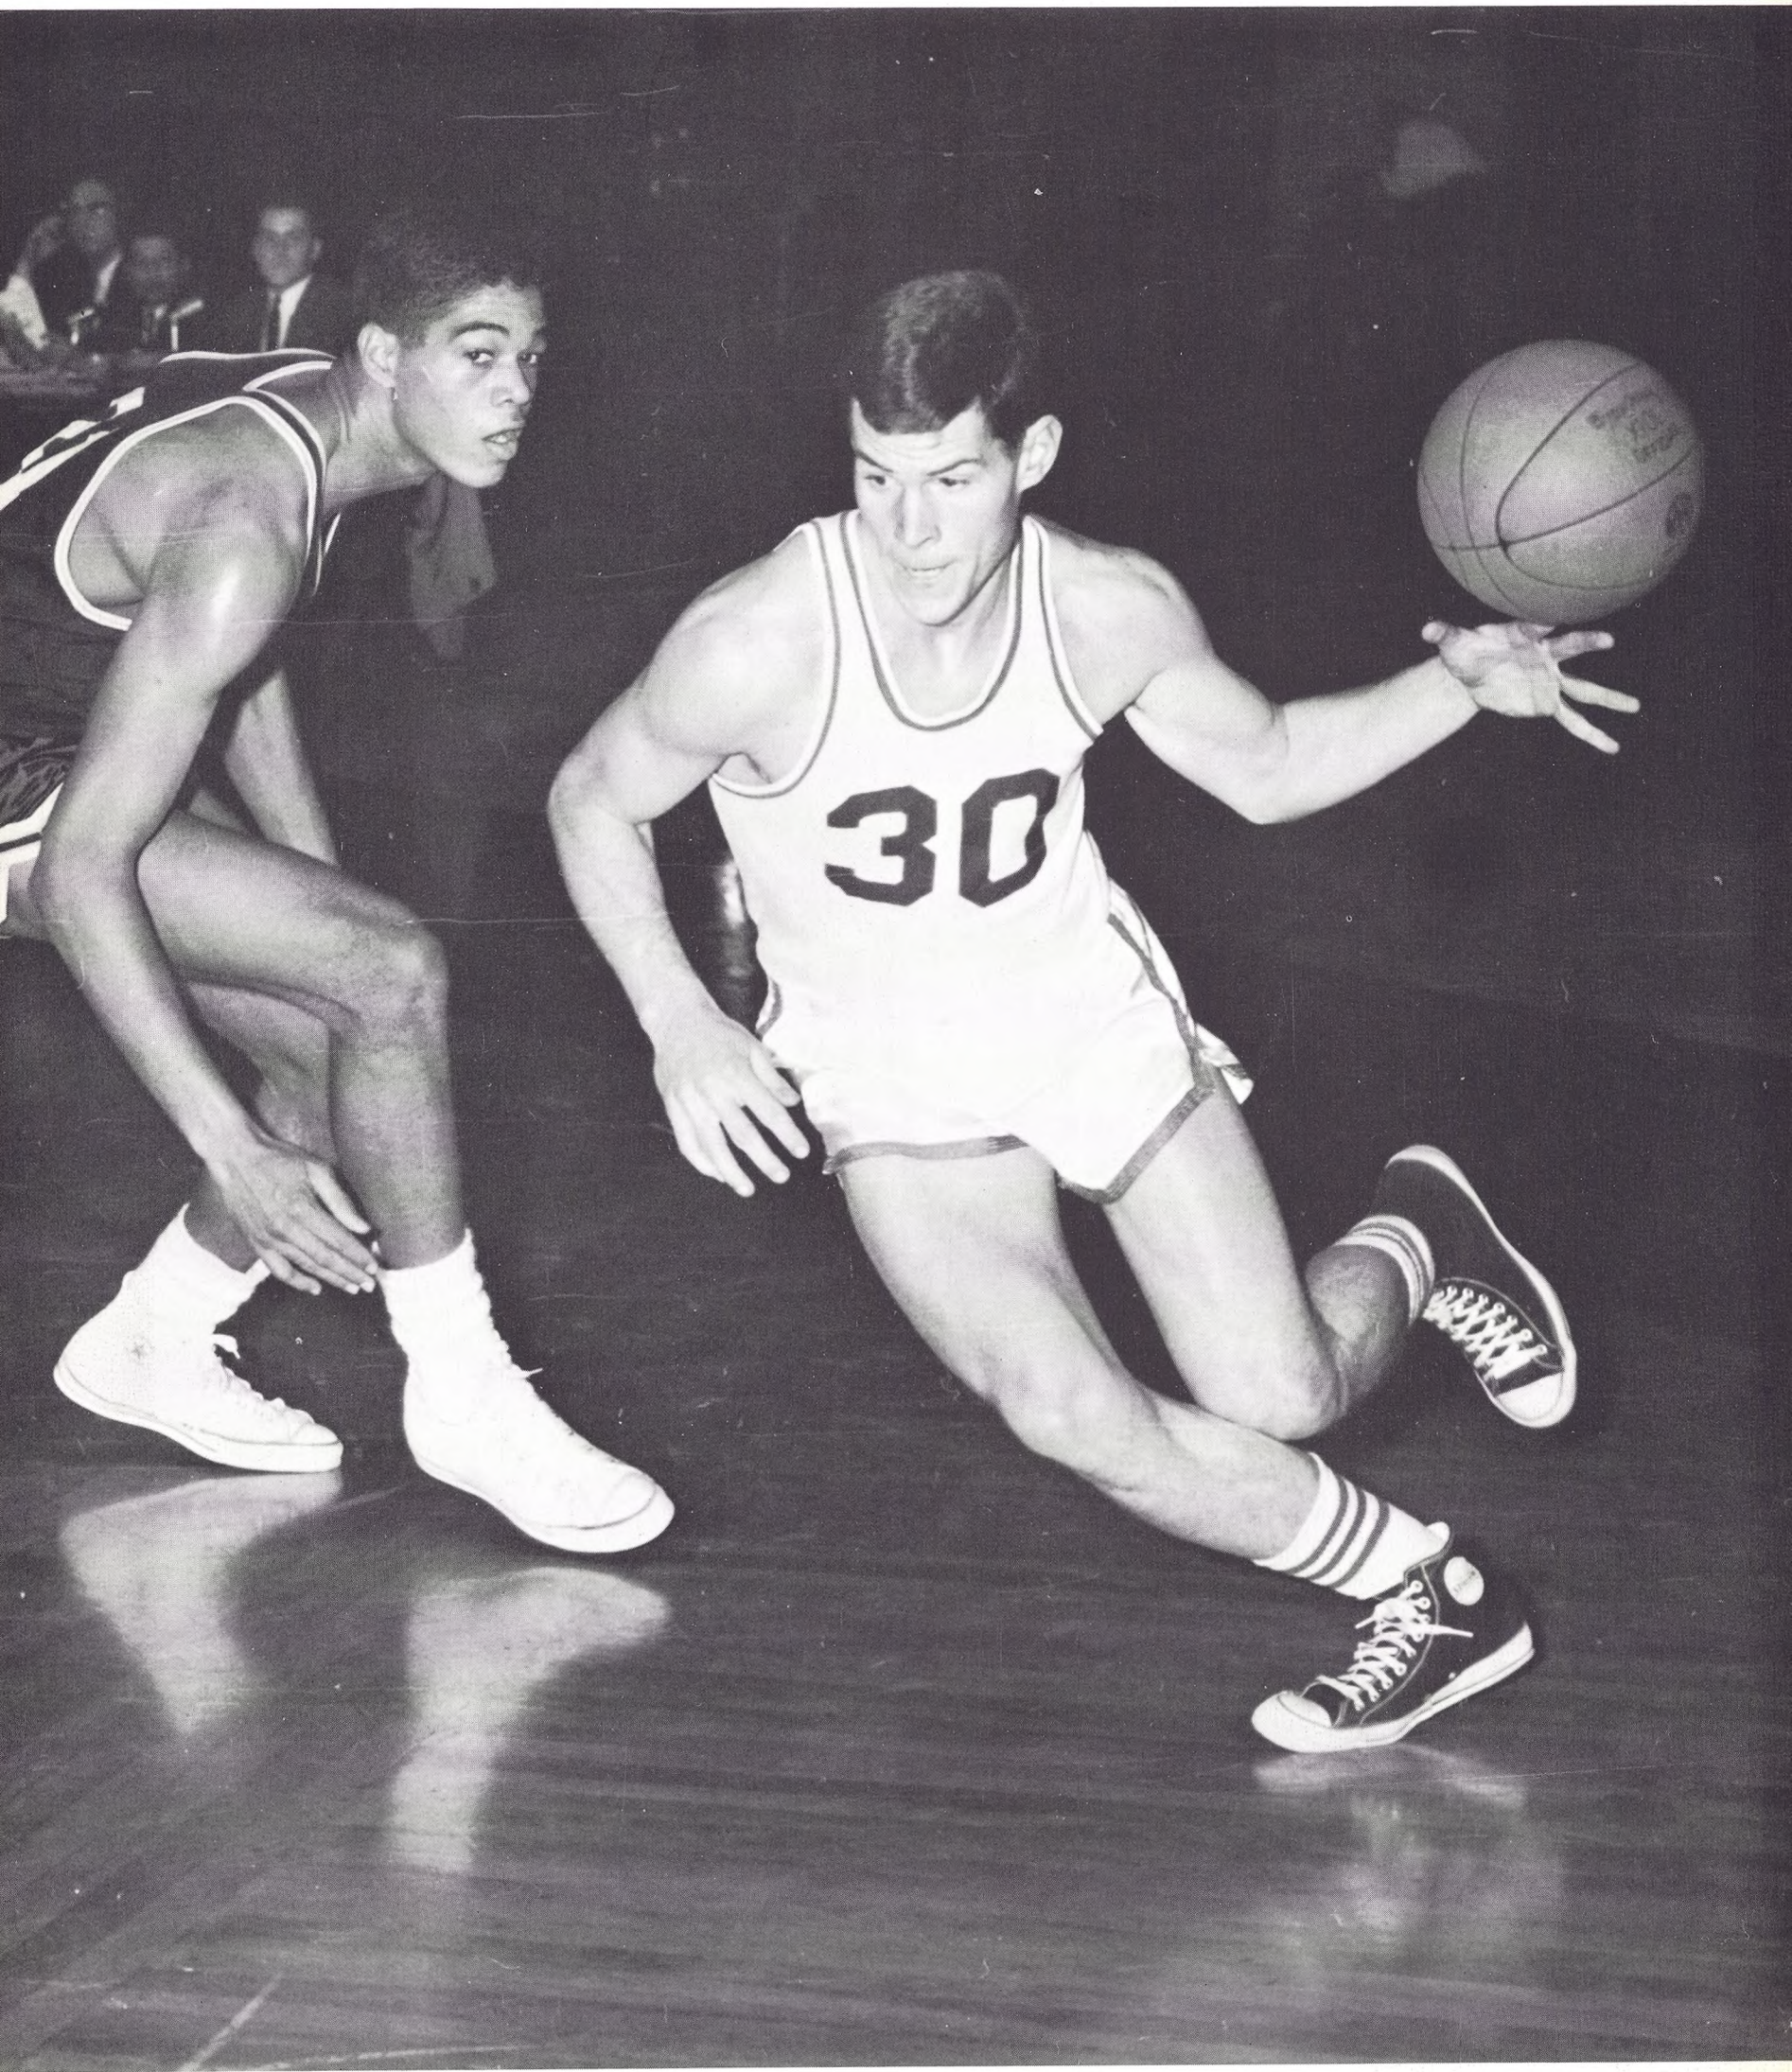

Jim Raftery received the ball with which he had scored the thousandth point of his three year career, and a proud and congratulatory student body contributed to present him with a trophy.

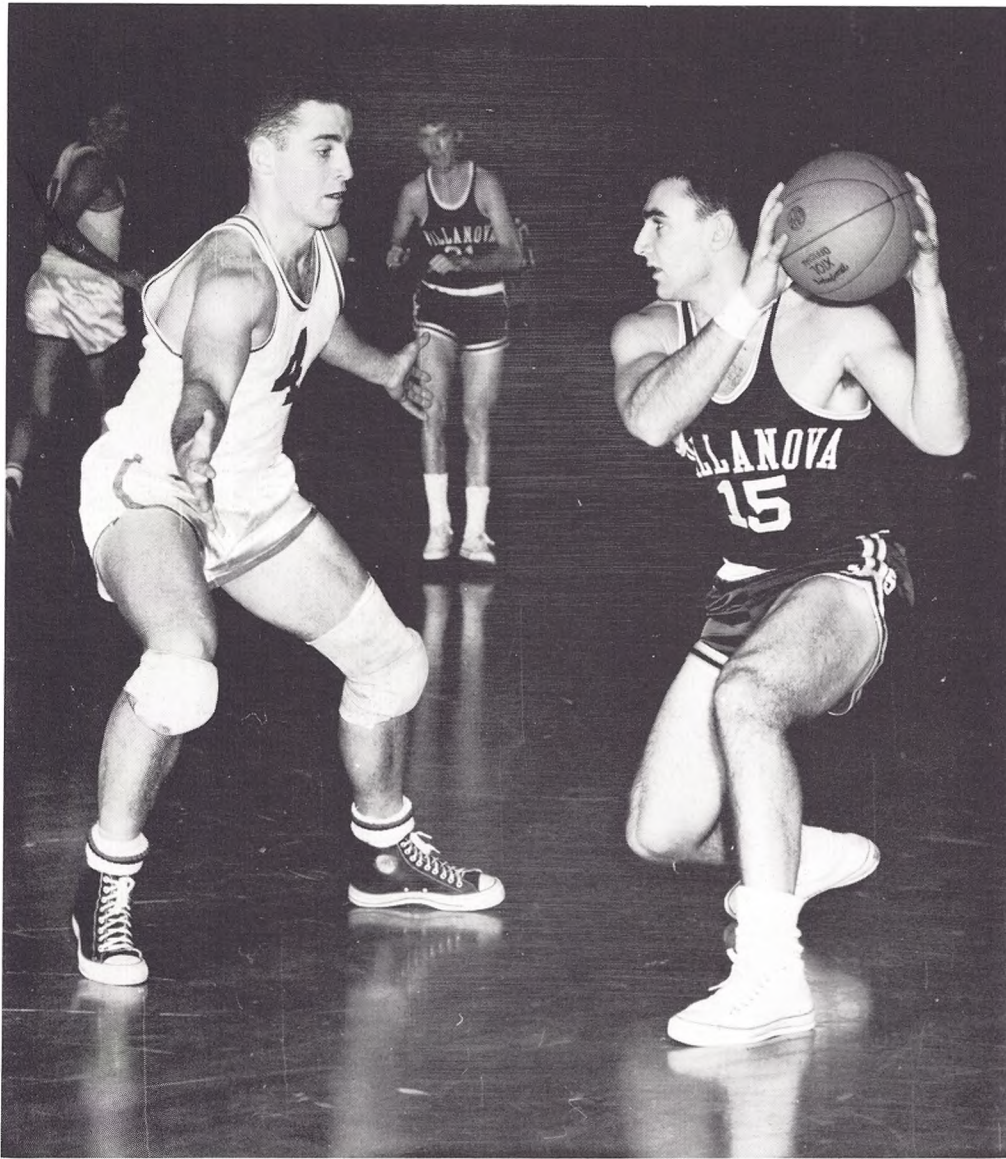

The next obstacle was the talented Manhattan College combo, who managed to keep up in the first half, but were lynched in the second by the quality defensive play of Ray Nash and Dick Alexander. Raftery again led the Terriers, with a total of 20 points, as the Jaspers were put down, 61-46. A pressureless game with the remains of the St. Peter's squad produced a 70-65 victory, and we all waited for the N.I.T. bid, wondering what the selection committee was waiting for. The nationally-ranked New York University team, sporting All-American Barry Kramer, handed a 76-62 defeat to St. Francis, but only after seeing fit to set three men on Raftery. Nash proved high scorer in this game, and exhibited defensive acumen once more, in holding Kramer to 11 points in the second half. George Steinmann subbed ably and showed a remarkably accurate eye from the foul line. The defeat hurt, but was not nearly as disturbing as the silence of the selection committee. We felt that we had earned an invitation to the N.I.T., but hope began to fade. Our rhythm began to decelerate. And then, almost suddenly, the announcement of the selection of "little" St. Francis College to the National Invitational Tournament. That same evening, with the pressure off, the Terriers dropped one to a Seton Hall team handicapped by the loss of All-American Nick Werkman, 71-60. The next day's Brooklyn Eagle became a souvenir. "N.I.T. Bid to St. Francis." We had arrived. The Gaels of Iona, who had been vying with us for the bid, resorted to fisticuffs to win the last game of the season, but after the excitement, the score stood in the Terrier's favor, 63-59.

At Madison Square Garden on March 16th, the Terriers met Miami University in the first round of the N.I.T. Betting odds had St. Francis as 20 point underdogs. Instead, fans saw a knock-down drag-out thriller which ended with Miami on top 71-70. The Hurricanes successfully froze the ball for the last 1:40 seconds of play cancelling out the great swan song performance of Jim Raftery who closed his career with a 23 point splurge. Jim was lost to the team through fouls for the last four minutes of play, and the 17 and 15 points scored by Kurowski and Nash respectively just fell short of what was needed for the Terriers to stage one of the great N.I.T. upsets.

In sum, a very successful year saw the squad lose only seven games and four of these were by a margin of one point.

Ray Nash demonstrates the kind of defense that had St. Francis ranked fourth in the Nation in that department. Most games were close over the year. Against Villanova above, the Terriers won by three points, 51-48.

Intramurals Underway

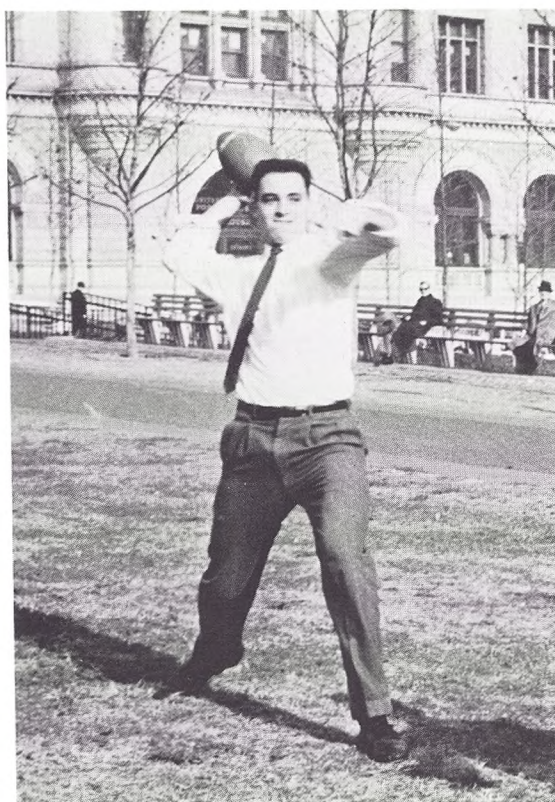

Bull's-eyes and Maggie's Drawers were in ample evidence during the Rifle Intramurals which were held in January. A total of 75 students participated in the competition which was sponsored by the Rifle Club. The participants under the direction of Brother Conrad, Club Moderator, competed in two divisions firing from the prone, sitting and standing positions. Robert Jankesh led the first Division with 252 points out of a possible 300. He was closely followed by Dennis Kennedy, 248, and Richard Randall, 247. In the second division, Gregory Egan was high man with 222. Brother Albert, 218, and Joseph Svirida, 210, took second and third places respectively.

During the Fall, Intramural Track and Field games were held at Van Cortlandt Park. John Clifford captured top honors in the competition which included the high jump, broad jump, shot put, 100 and 440 yard dashes.

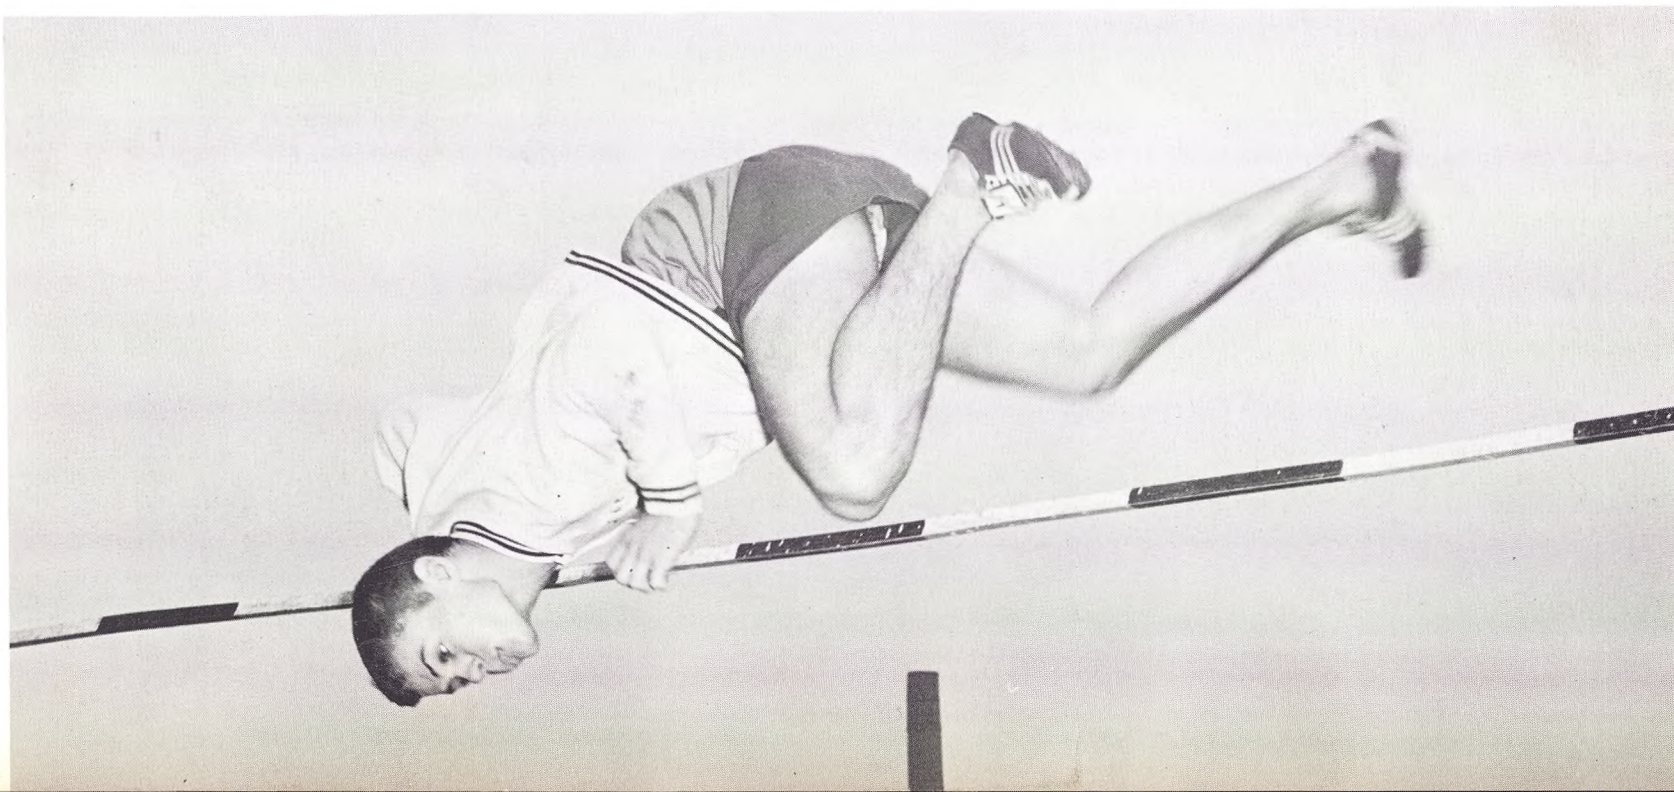

At this writing, other intramurals are about to begin. Basketball Intramurals will be held in the refurbished gym at Butler Street during March. Volley Ball and Foul Shooting competitions will follow. Other Intramurals planned for the Spring are Bowling, Handball, and Swimming at the Metropolitan Pool.

Michalski scored high in rifle intramurals at Armory but was defeated by 252 round of Bob Jankesh.

A.A.U. and Eastern Champs

Coach of the year, Charlie Schaem, sets out for West Point with his bag of tricks.

Last spring, riding the first wave of enthusiasm in the East for a sport primarily popular on the West Coast, the Terrier water polo team captured the Junior National A.A.U. Championship as well as the Eastern Collegiate Water Polo Conference title. A string of 13 victories was the result of coach Charlie Schaem's policy of constant practice and fine team spirit and control in a rugged sport.

The season began with a doubleheader. The Terriers, led by co-captains Charlie Harris and Don McQuade first downed R.P.I. 9-1, and after a short rest handed a fresh M.I.T. squad a 17-13 defeat.

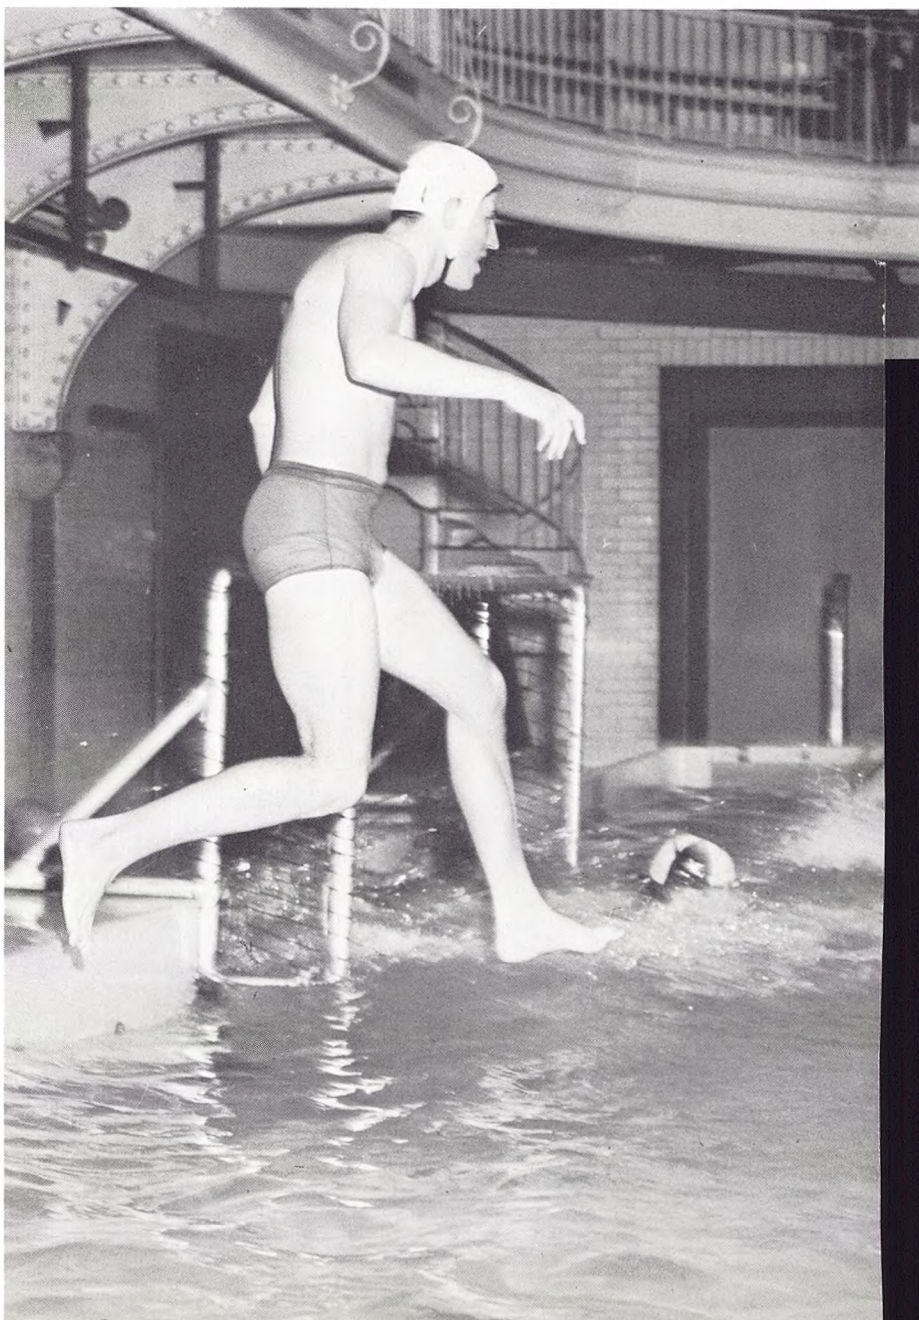

In rapid succession, the team recorded victories over Queens College, 17-7; St. Peter's, 17-3; and Brooklyn Polytech, 12-3. Veterans Larry Lynch and Frank Loughlin provided scoring punch in all three contests. Journeying to Boston to meet M.I.T. again, the Terrier waterpups defeated the Engineers, 11-3. Don McQuade sparked a wall-like defense, holding the opposition scoreless in the first half.

The undefeated Frankies next met a fine Cadet squad at West Point, and thanks to goalie Roger Pullis, who keystoneed the solid defense, put them down, 11-5. Yale alone remained an obstacle to the league championship and an undefeated season. A tight game in New Haven produced an 8-5 Terrier win. With a 7-0 record, St. Francis took the Eastern Collegiate Conference Championship.

In the competition for the A.A.U. Junior National Championship, Tim Stafford, Tom Murphy, and Ed Mikos led the hatching of an inexperienced Bishop Loughlin combo, 10-4. Harris, Peters, and Svirida spearheaded winning efforts over Texas A. & M., the West Point plebes, R.P.I., and a tough New York Athletic Club team. In the sixth game, St. Francis defeated the Army Varsity, 8-4, and annexed the Junior National title.

After the tournament, four members of the team, Charlie Harris, Don McQuade, Ed Peters and Joe Svirida, took part in international competition as part of the N.Y.A.C. team which won the North American title trophy by playing Toronto to a 4-4 tie. Charlie Harris received a nomination as a candidate for the All-American team.

During the Fall, taking time out from constant practice, the Terriers played one game, defeating the Air Force Academy, 21-5.

Riflemen Organize

Despite the many setbacks, the campus gunmen suffered at the hands of their opponents during their first year of intercollegiate competition the team has gelled into a solid organization. To date, the team has participated in six matches, three by mail and three, shoulder to shoulder. The results show one victory over Pace College and five losses to such teams as West Point, Fordham and Brooklyn Polytech.

Brother Conrad, the team moderator, and Dennis Kennedy, Marine Reservist, supervised the team's practice and secured team membership in the newly-formed Metropolitan Intercollegiate Rifle League. The practice sessions were held at the Marine Corps Training Center at 22 Chapel Street on Monday and Friday from 2:00 to 7:00 P.M. Brother Conrad instructed some thirty members as they regularly fired 35 rounds from the prone, sitting and standing positions. The team's armament was increased and improved this year with the addition of two Anshultz rifles. Team members have received individual recognition including medals, pins, patches, and certificates from the National Rifle Association to which they are an affiliate.

Other activities included a guest lecturer who compared the new M-14 rifle to the M-1 and Browning Automatic Rifle, and an interesting film tracing the development of

The improvement in shooting skill developed over this first year of intensive practice has been amazing. Perhaps the best evidence of this was Rich Randall's top individual score for the team—a 279 made at the St. John's Invitational Tournament.

Keglers Lag in

Scorers Paul Lutz and Joe Scholle
gloat over 3-0 victory over Pace College.

This season the Keglers incorporated themselves with the Eastern Intercollegiate Bowling Conference, which necessitated moving their base of operations from Queens to the Bowlmor Alleys in Manhattan's Union Square. As members of this league the squad competes with sixteen other colleges.

At this writing it appears that '63 will not be the "Kegler's year." In the torrid pace set by the Conference, three games a week are played. The St. Francis record currently stands at 23 wins and 37 losses.

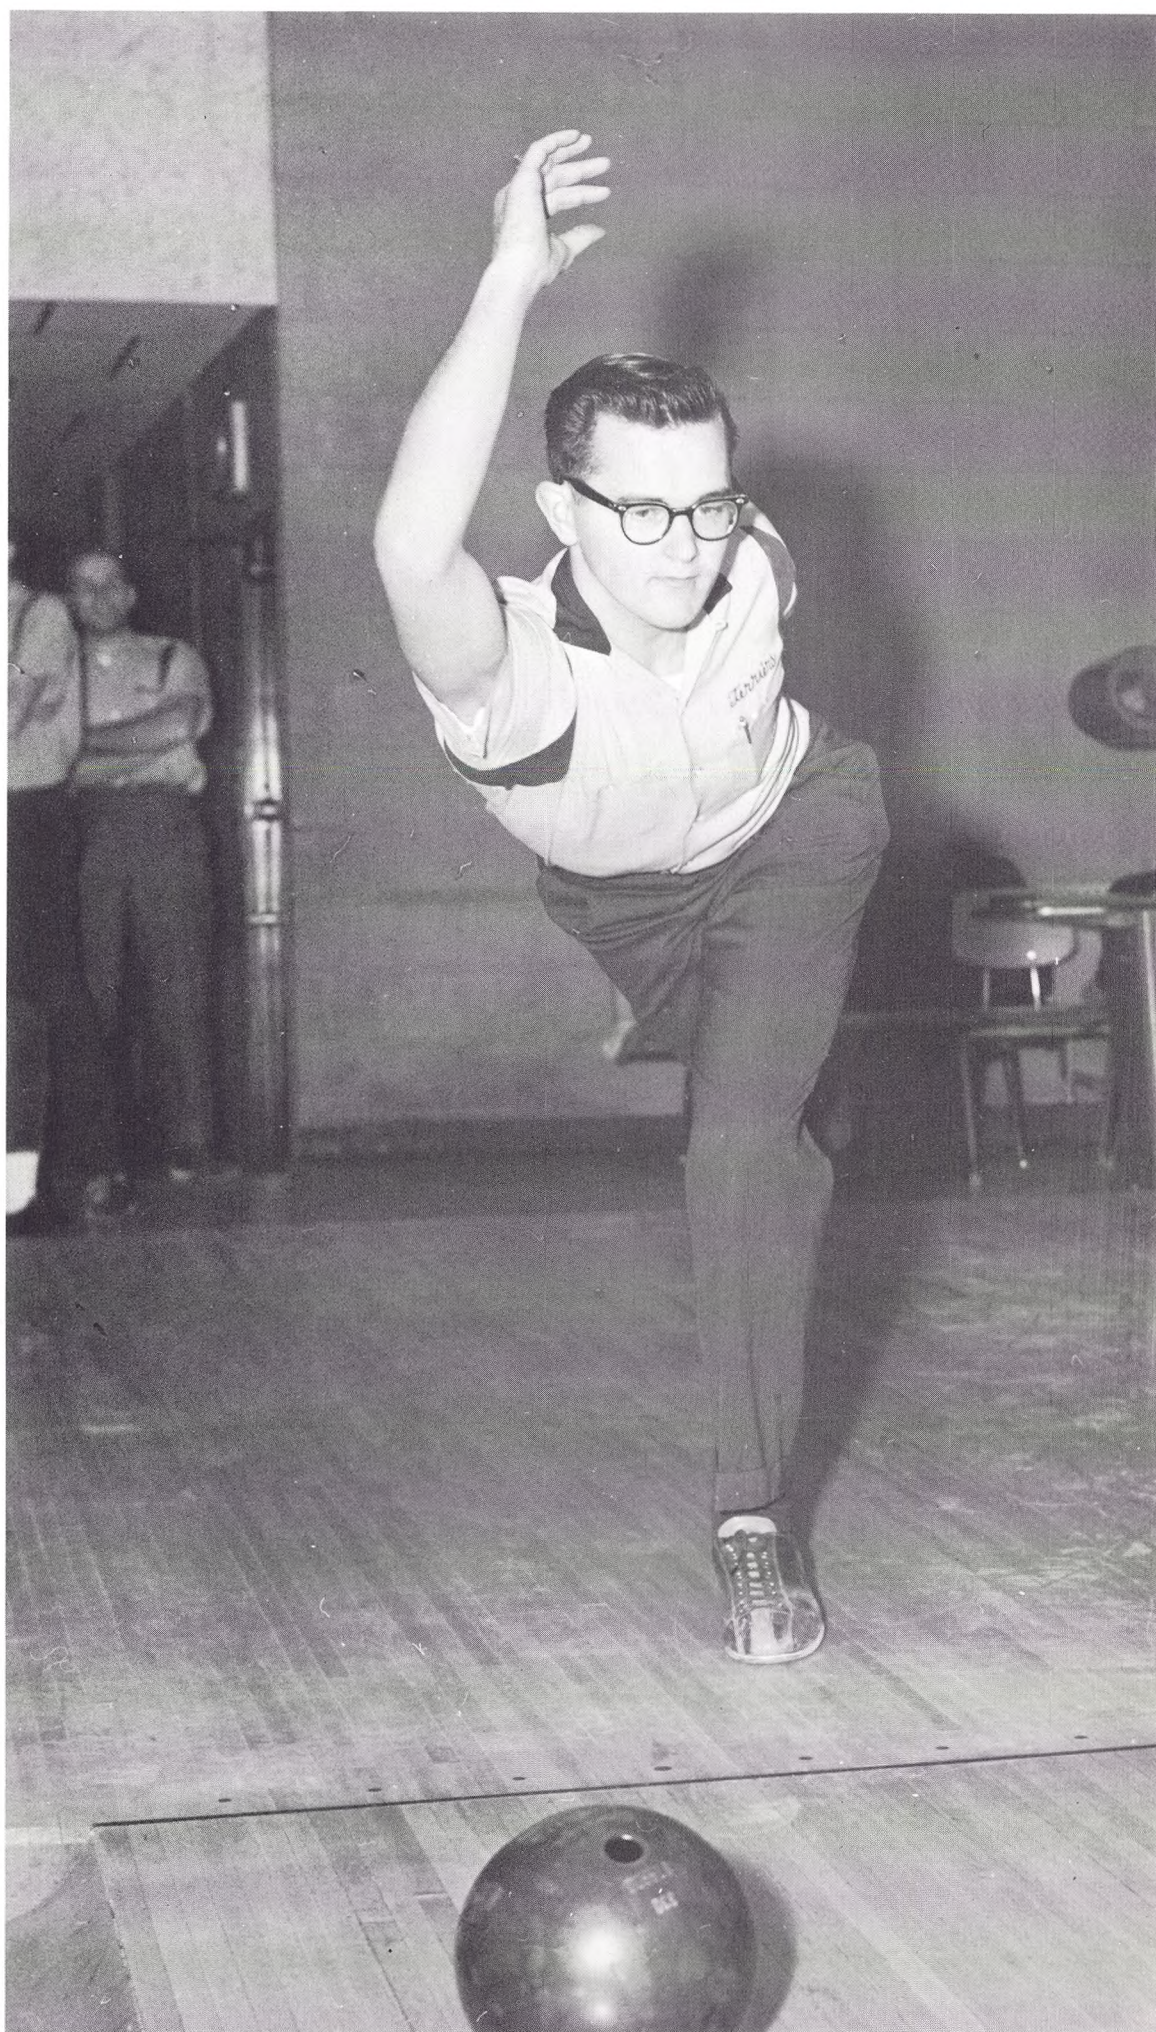

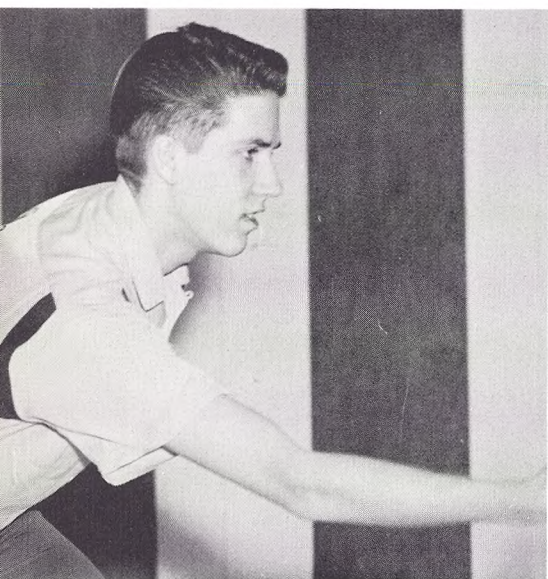

Reasons for the mediocre showing no doubt stem from the loss of stars Nastri and Veneziano via graduation. Carlson, Lutz, and Scholle have returned from last year, and of these Carlson has led the team to successes of the year. Rounding out the squad are new-comers, Chojnowski, Lopatynski, and Scudder. Their averages continue to improve. This, and the experience garnered in their first year of college competitions offer optimism for Terrier bowling prospects next season.

Terrier Nine Preps For The Spring Season

A soon-to-be dampened optimism characterized the spirit of a promising Terrier squad at the September opening of the baseball season. Coach Pete Fazio's team trained in earnest for an active Fall season which would be highlighted by participation in both the Iona and Knickerbocker Tournaments. But the usually crisp New York autumn turned into a messy, miserable season of Monsoons.

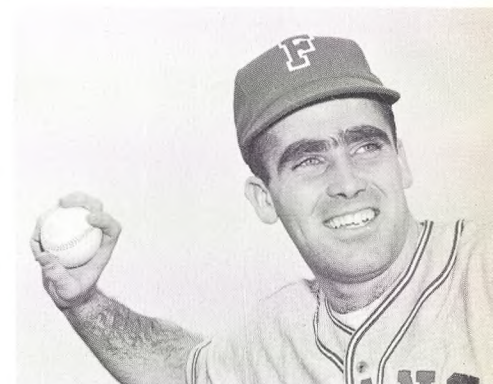

The optimism grew with the early indications of value and quality displayed by Sophomore pitchers Bill Ryan and Ed Cremin both of whom were named to all-city honors while in high school. In addition, Ray Nash, captain of the Varsity, appeared on a continued hot-streak, having batted .450 last season. Senior Pete Callahan, a three year veteran who batted .420 last year, returned to the lineup after an illness in the Fall. Other starters included at first base, Patrick Gilberto; short-stop, Sam Ramirez; third base, Al Gennarelli; catcher, Paul Buckley; outfielders, Kevin Donohue and Dom Quartuccio. Providing the second line of defense were pitchers, Rich Martin and Ron Ansman; and utility men, John Lessard, Bob Costanzo and Senior Jim Healy.

During the Fall the Terrier nine got off to a good start, defeating Pace, 6-2, in a scrimmage. An extra degree of emotion in the game rode on the fact that Pace coach Richie Dreyer, a recent St. Francis graduate, had played for S.F.C. with several members of the current team.

The Pace contest proved an uncertain omen of the short autumn. Soon thereafter, the sudden illness of standout veteran Pete Callahan came as a shock. A second scrimmage contest resulted in a 12-5 defeat at the hands of the L.I.U. squad. And then the rains came. When they finally ceased, both Tournaments had been cancelled, and uniforms were stashed in mothballs to await, hopefully, a showerless April.

Election to the Duns Scotus Society, one of the highest honors a student may receive, fell to ten St. Francis men in 1963. Outstanding scholarship and prominence in extracurricular activities were equally important in the elections. Applicants were screened by two committees, one composed of students, the other of members of the faculty. Their final selection consisted of eight seniors and two juniors.

Spencer Heads Student Council

The Student Council this year achieved two things: a modicum of efficiency, and an awareness of its authority. Credit for the efficiency belongs to Hugh McMenamin and the members of his Election Committee, who monitored and tallied all elections to the satisfaction of all parties, and to Ted Spencer's introduction of bureaucracy. Policies of the Council regarding advertising kept the Remsen Street buildings from taking on the waste-basket aspect Butler Street often had. Committees throughout the year operated with distinction, particularly Joe Carabetta's Evaluations Committee, whose docket was crowded as the Council fulfilled its duty to "regulate and supervise such activities as are placed within its scope." Along these lines the Council accepted the Radio Club, the St. Thomas Law Society, and the College Forum as new activities.

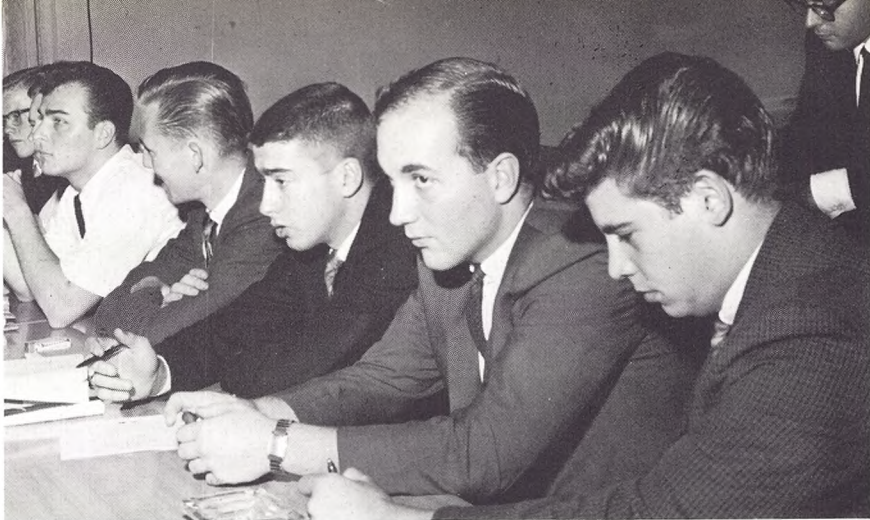

Beyond this, and of perhaps farther reaching importance was the realization by the Council of the meaning of its role as a representative student assembly. Awareness of current student concerns came to the College through the National Student Association, the National Federation of Catholic College Students, and the newly formed Metropolitan Intercollegiate Activities Council. Enlarged awareness led to enlarged actions, as the Council, mediated a controversy between the International Relations Club and a group of students, set up a committee to examine and report upon the present curriculum and another to investigate the possibilities of a College bookstore, and vigorously enforced its policies on advertising.

Pi Alpha Lacks Lodgings

Pi Alpha, first frat on campus to have a frat house, this year became the only frat on campus without one. Like Jabberwocks "burbling through the tuggley wood," Pi Alpha brothers roamed from lounge to street to local bar conducting fraternity affairs in any available space.

Partly because of this lack of privacy and partly because they wanted to show the way toward providing more dignity for frats, Pi Alpha innovated a new concept in dogging. Cast aside were the outrageous costumes previously foisted upon initiates. This year's pledges wore suit coats and ties and a conservative, yellow, plastic beanie topped by a conservative, flashing red light. Instead of the insane activities assigned to prospective members in former years, Pi Alpha imposed a saner but no less rigid test. The mettle and intelligence of pledges were put to the test by means of a series of questions to which they were expected to know the answers. Such challenging queries as "How does your flashing, red light operate?" helped to indicate to the members the potential greatness of those being considered for acceptance.

Other activities less crucial than dogging but of major importance were engineered by the frat. Social functions like the Post-Providence-Basketball-Game Beer Racket and the Thanksgiving Day Dance at the New Yorker and the St. Patrick's Day Party provided comradic respite in a year of rootlessness.

Consul General of the Indonesian delegation to the U.N. addresses I.R.C.

The Political Forum unexpectedly became a debate between modern Republican (Mr. Henig of the Republican State Committee) and conservative Republican factions.

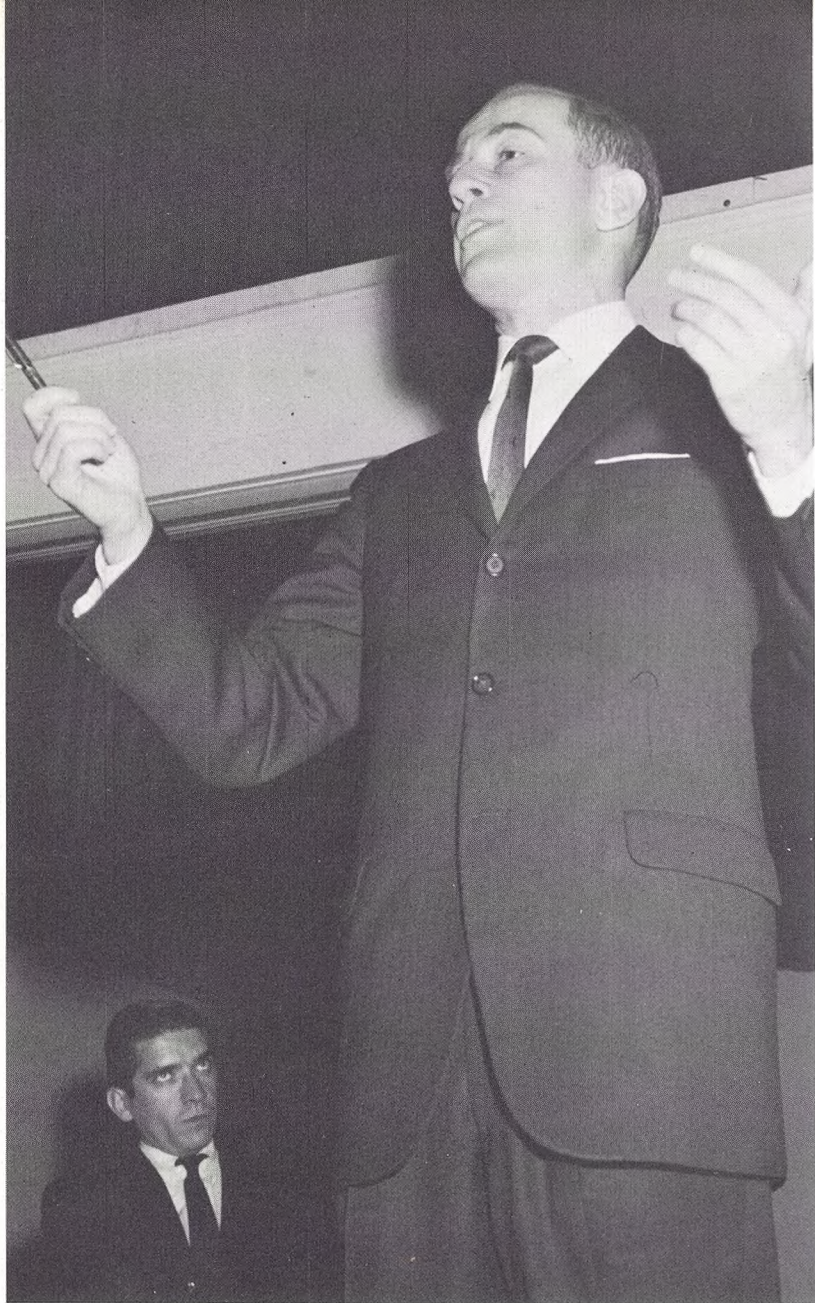

Planning and protocol of the speakers' program for the year fell to I.R.C. President Tom Burke.

I. R. C. Probes

Insight into international relations (sometimes called statesmanship) and familiarity with domestic government (sometimes called political savvy) are the twin goals of the International Relations Club. In line with these goals, the club, under President Thomas Burke, explored topics ranging from "Problems of the Common Market" to the United Nations to "The Socio-economic Theories of Henry George."

A wedding of the abstract and the practical is the underlying purpose of conventions sponsored by the National Association of International Relations Clubs. Ten delegates from St. Francis attended the Eastern Regional meeting in Philadelphia and the National Convention at Springfield, Mass. to participate in heady seminars on the European Economic Community and to taste the sweet and sour of political pot-luck. men failed to re-capture the national chairmanship held last year by Ted Spencer but did manage to have their man Ted elected as Parliamentarian of the Eastern Regional.

In-school activities encompassed everything from the scholarly lecture to the galvanic political forum. A series of talks by the British, German, and Italian Consuls illuminated problems of the British Isles and the Continent. Representatives of the Republican, Conservative, and Democratic parties took sides in a verbal slug-fest at the annual Political Forum.

During the New York Senatorial race, the campaign trailed candidate James B. Donovan to St. Francis. Mr. Donovan, negotiator for the release of Castro hostages and President Emeritus of St. Francis' Council of Regents, spoke as a guest of the I.R.C.

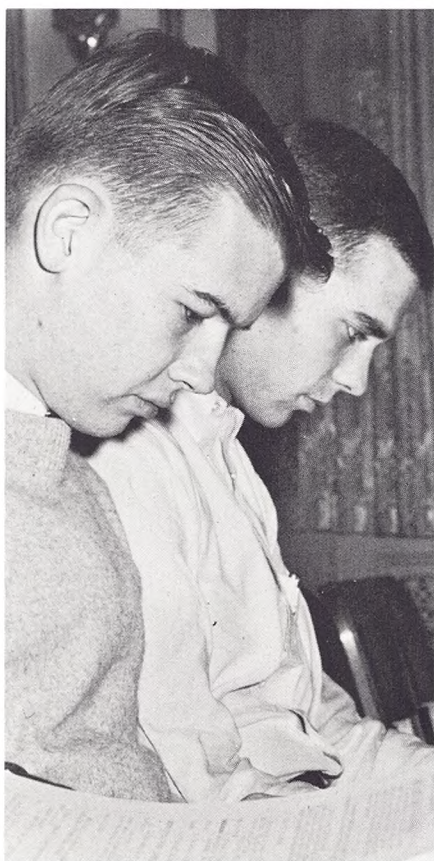

James B. Donovan, candidate for the United States Senate, responds to question at I.R.C. lecture.

Behind the scenes maneuvering by Bob DeZorzi, Orazio Ciccarelli, and Tom Burke kept the St. Francis delegation in a position of strength at the National Convention of I.R.C. clubs.

Dr. Ellis, Moderator of the I.R.C., kept the club abreast of developments by personally observing many phases of the College expansion and improvement program.

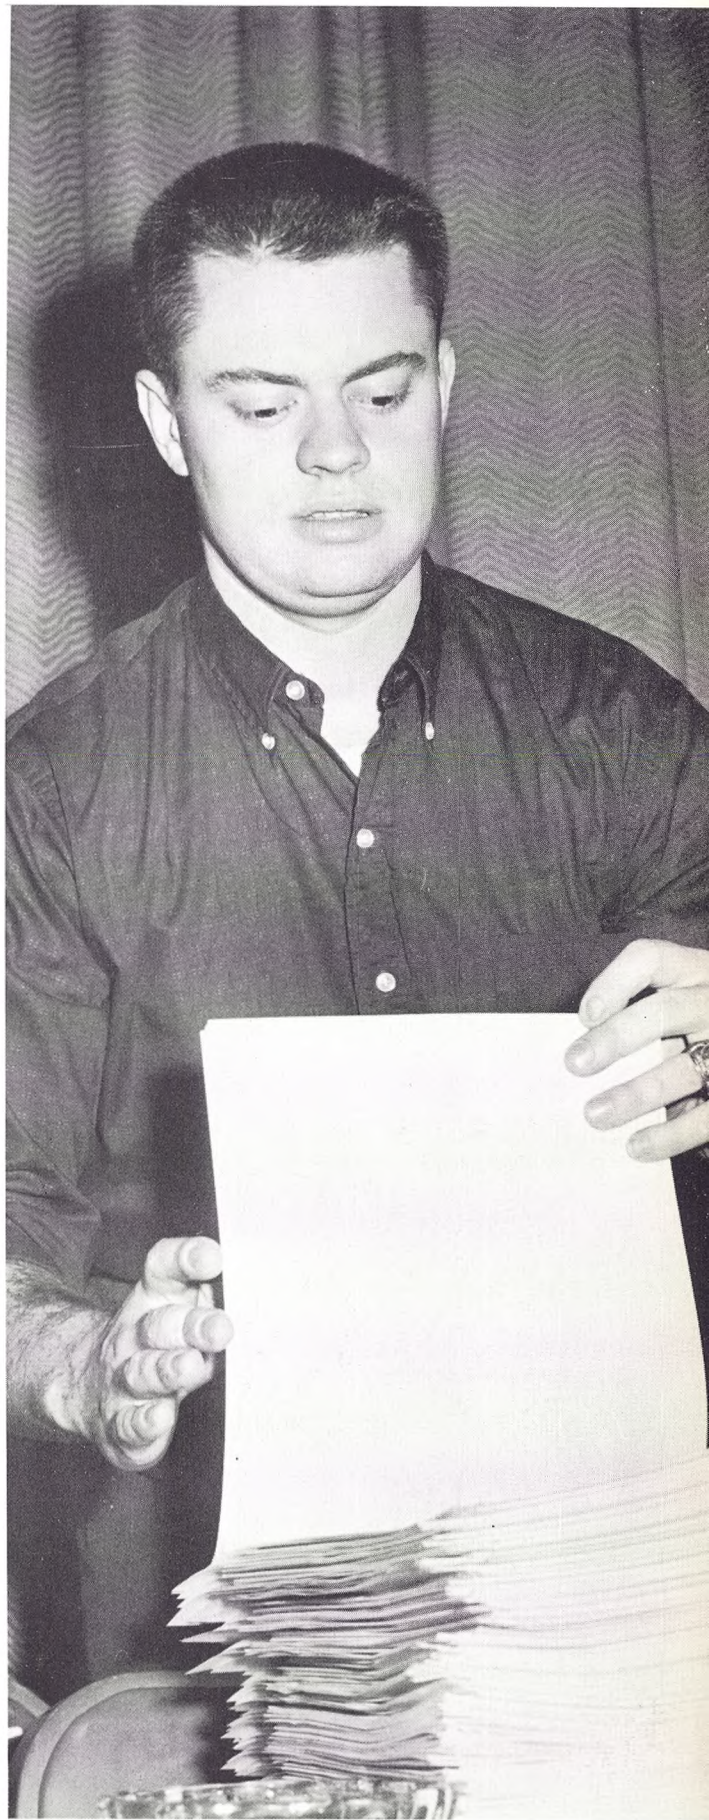

Jim Duffield and John Lehner read up on convention minutes.

Bob DeZorzi was elected as President to succeed Tom Burke for 1963-64.

Festival of

The staid, old Humanities Club celebrated its tenth anniversary year with a film festival. President Tom Swanzey laid a banquet table consisting of many cinematic delicacies. There were British appetizers like "Our Man in Havana" and "The Mouse That Roared," continental entrees from Italy "The Bicycle Thief" and France "Diary of a Country Priest," and an American dessert, "A Raisin in the Sun." But the celebrants were conspicuous by their absence and the Festival ran deeply in the red.

Far more successful were occasional talks by members and guests at regular meetings. Nick Spaddacini on Cervantes, Luke Colasuonno on Ca-

Phi Rho Pi is Forty

Founded in 1923 by a small group of St. Francis men who affiliated with a group from Manhattan College, Phi Rho Pi this year celebrated its fortieth anniversary.

Like all frats, Phi Rho Pi consists of a body of zanies who sometimes rise to the call of service. Light-hearted activities, of course, fulfill the prime function of the organization which is to foster the social life of its brothers. Social highlight of the year was the Fortieth Annual Ball held at the Hotel Diplomat. Pledges got a taste of the dog's life, as usual, except that dog-ging was held away from the College building. A slightly more subdued and reflective moment in the frenetic life of the fraternity occurred at the Communion Breakfast.

Opportunities for service arose and the brothers responded. Phi Rho Pi boasts that the Vice President of the Student Council, Editor of the Voice, President of the Glee Club, and President of the Gaelic Society are all members of the frat. Children in hospitals and orphanages benefited from Phi Rho Pi's Christmas Toy Drive.

During the band's intermission at the Annual Ball, high-spirited brothers sing the praises of the golden brew.

Three Scenes from hazing rituals: "Maury Wills" Laria ponders fate of the Mets should he die during dogging; it's a bird, it's a plane—no, it's a Phi Rho dog; "Manuel Ycaza" Allen takes pensive breather in torture proceedings.

President Doug Thompson thinks over query on the price of Business Club membership cards.

B. B. A's Sharpen Social Skills

In the bailiwick of the business executive, people are important. Future executives from St. Francis got a feel for working with people in both the social and business sense through activities of the Business Club. Members cooperated on social events and conducted discussions and lectures on career opportunities.

Under the direction of President Douglas Thompson, the club held a cocktail social at Kelly's Lounge. Highlight of the year was the Annual Dance at a New York hotel.

A speaker from Cities Service Company provided would-be Horatio Algiers with tips on employment opportunities in the petroleum industry. In order to present a wider spectrum of interests, the club voted to affiliate with a national business fraternity. At this writing, negotiations are underway.

Singers Get Rehearsal Room

The Glee Club made its first public appearance at the Annual Christmas Assembly, sounding out in ringing a capella manner. Efforts on the part of both members and Professor Fiorenza, did much to overcome lack of practice space.

The move to Remsen Street ended years of seeming ostra-cization as the Club moved into new quarters. Those noisy practice sessions necessary for producing beautiful music now could take place without causing disturbance. Gounod, Franck, and Mozart were polished and later presented at the Charter Day Ceremonies and Commencement Exercises.

Philosophers Ponder Progress

Under the unassuming leadership of Walter Cuff, the Philosophy Club made the leap from potency to act. Membership remained small, but activity and interest ran high. Mr. Farley and Dr. Carpino served as co-moderators.

"The Philosophy of the Russian Novelists" was the topic of a fascinating lecture by Mr. Farley. But the Club's major endeavor was a participation in the N.F.C.C.S. Philosophy Commission Project.

Weekly Seminars on the Meaning of Progress, during which members of the Club presented papers on various aspects of the concept, were held on Monday evenings. Papers by Mark Thomas and Walter Cuff were submitted in an intercollegiate competition. Walter Cuff's essay won second honors.

tice develop the basic skills which make a sea faring man. Naval history, weapons and equipment technology, and sea-going jargon constitute the three R's of their education.

Control of Third Order Goes to Undergrads

Alumni are fine people but Alumni tend to lose contact with the student body. Moreover, a student group controlled by Alumni often becomes too removed from the realities of college life to be effective. In order to eliminate such hindrances from the St. Francis Chapter of the Third Order Secular, Moderator Brother Anthelm appointed matriculating students to offices formerly held by Alumni.

The shakeup resulted in a re-vitalization of the fraternity's program. Activities included a Communion brunch, three dialogues, and the celebratin of the Divine Liturgy of St. John Chrysostom. Brother Urban, Brother Henry and Mr. Farley were guests of honor at the brunch and Mr. Hashimoto, former faculty member now at Manhattan College, was the main speaker. Theological, ecclesiastical and religious problems were covered in the dialogue series moderated by Mr. Nino Languilli. An English language Byzantine rite mass celebrated in April shed light on the nature of the Eastern Catholic liturgy.

A Rose is a Rose?

The Little World of the Public Relations Office grows larger every day. Symptomatic of the College's new squeaky-clean image is the growth of the P.R. Office which has extended itself to students affairs. One of the most subtle devices yet devised by the people at 166 is the Press Club.

The Press Club, a virtual nonentity before expansion fever hit St. Francis, has developed from a bunch of loyal students clipping favorable stories about the College from newspapers for display on bulletin boards to a more or less subversive bunch of image makers. Members now clip news stories constructed from press releases prepared by their own hands. This, of course, saves them the task of seeking only stories which are geared to the image since all stories now bear the stamp of P.R.

P.R. leaves no sector untouched. The Press Club conducted a workshop for high school students. Journalism tips and St. Francis propaganda were the orders of the day for the open-minded youths. Members have also been known to serve as ushers for dinners at which captains of industry developed pleasant, gastronomic impressions of St. Francis College. Alma mater is progressing rapidly; is growing up to the image. Paper tigers from little P.R. Offices grow.

The Omega dogging road show always gathered crowds to the delight of all but the stars.

Omega Holds First Ball

Having gathered enough moral and fiscal strength to support such an undertaking, Omega Delta Chi held its First Annual Ball at the Manger Vanderbilt and published its first journal in conjunction with the dance.

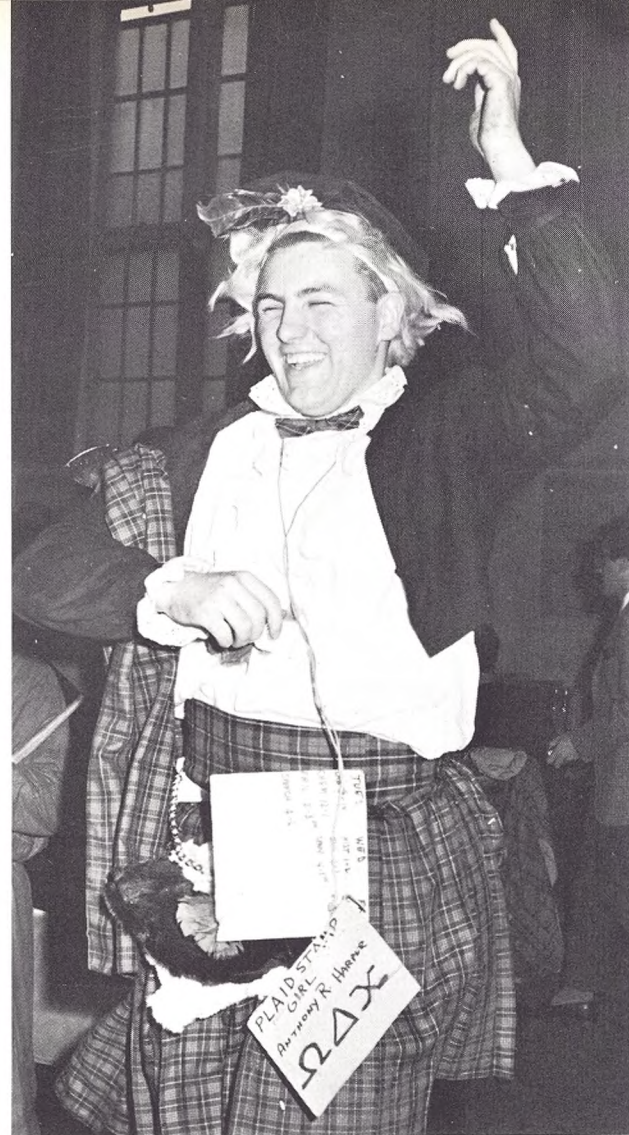

Under the sober guidance of Chancellor Mike Martini, the frat held a raffle in May, offering the incentive of a basket of cheer to the winning donor. The raffle preceded a beer racket at National Bohemian Hall.

A Communion Breakfast was held in memory of James McGoff. Father Joachim celebrated the Mass and Dr. Flynn spoke on the Lay Apostolate.

Members of Omega Delta Chi were active in publicity work for the Annual St. Francis College Blood Bank Drive. They also participated in the Press Club workshop.

Franciscan Chronicles "The Big Move"

Phillip Mercorella, Photography Assistant.

Provided with a tailor made theme by the College's move to Remsen Street, the yearbook staff survived the year with only two contributors developing ulcers. Highlight of the year was a balanced budget skillfully achieved by Business Manager Pete Nulty. Despite the loss of expensive camera equipment to burglars, Franciscan 1963 became the first St. Francis Annual in recent memory to pay for itself without running a troublesome booster drive.

An unexpected boon was the discovery of talented Berkeley Fleming former editor of the Army's Southwest European newspaper. Fleming (subsequently elected Editor-in-Chief of Franciscan 1964) provided enough impetus to get the publication through the difficult phase of implementing its theme in an interesting format and layout.

Past problems of inadequate work area were solved when the Franciscan was honored with a large, sunny office in the College's new diggings. A magnificent view of the secretary-filled Lafayette National Bank building directly across the street, proved a constant source of inspiration to the urbane editorial staff.

The most gratifying fact of a good year to Moderator Brother Michael and Editor-in-Chief Martin Hamburger was that talented students flocked to Room 500 to offer their services to the Franciscan. Most staffers were also prominent in other activities. For example: Associate editor Frank De Caro doubled as editor of the Sillion; Tom Swanzey and Joe Skerrett were officers of the Humanities Club; Don McQuade was Co-captain of the Water Polo team; Pete Nulty served as Historian of Pi Alpha; Tom Burke and Bob De Zorzi were President and President Elect of the I.R.C. Moreover, over half of the staff received Franciscan Spirit Awards and six of the seventeen St. Francis nominees for Who's Who were Franciscan contributors.

Who's Who in Colleges

Of course, it was decided in a smoke-filled room. Who would be Who? Student Council Vice President Hugh McMenamin directed the procedure of selecting St. Francis' nominees for the Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities directory of 1963.

Thirty-odd applicants, worthies all, we might suppose, were carefully considered by a committee consisting of Voice editor Ed Fox, seniors Tom Swanzey and Frank De Caro and Student Council President Bill Spencer, who sat in ex officio.

Wishing to avoid the sort of criticism levied upon past choices for the honor, the committee screened every application at least twice. After six hours the decisions had been made. Seventeen students were nominated and later confirmed by the Student Council.

Franciscan Spirit Awards

Virtue is its own reward but public recognition is sweeter. Thirty-seven activities-minded juniors and seniors were singled out by a Student Council committee for this year's plaques. In a five hour meeting, the committee studied applications for signs that prospective winners had displayed that rare and valued quality known as Franciscan Spirit. That Spirit, whose definition is in a constant state of flux, took on a new connotation of dubious worth when not a single murmur of discontent was voiced over the selections.

Radio Club Formed

The Radio Club founded and guided through the Student Council approval procedures by Ernie Mortuzans, has as its goal the building of an amateur radio station at St. Francis. Charter members of the fledgling club studied code and electronics theory. Their studies were under the tutelage of Dr. Tremmel of the physics department.

All of the club's members seek to qualify for the Federal Communications Radio Amateur License. Activities of the "hams" could become a large factor in the future growth of St. Francis. Enthusiastic Vice President, Dennis Burke, put it this way: "Soon the students of St. Francis will be able to converse with the world."

Voice Bounces Back

Hampered by student apathy, lack of confidence expressed in a limited budget, inadequate office space, minimal co-operation from all sectors, dearth of such basics as usable typewriters or cameras, the upheaval of the move to Remsen Street and faced with the task of creating a student newspaper out of the shambles left by his predecessors, Ed Fox accomplished minor miracles.

Criticism of Editor Fox's bi-weekly productions was rampant. Some issues had a ratio of one column inch of news to every three inches of ads and filler. Some of the features were glutted with high school humor. News was sometimes passed up because of space limitations. Editorializing seemed to be de rigeur in many issues. Lo and behold! There were even errors in grammar and spelling.

But one fact stood up despite the outcries. For the first time in at least two years, St. Francis College had a regularly published student paper. Credit goes to an editor who was the first junior in eight years to be given the post.

Math Activity Abounds

Numbers numbers numbers numbers. And equations and divers other things mathematical. Such is the stuff of the Math Club. That's an obvious deduction. Less apparent was the quiet vitality of the club. Two speakers, Mr. Christman, personnel manager of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company and Mr. Corey of International Business Machines, were invited to weekly meetings. Mr. Christman discussed the role of the mathematician in actuarial work and Mr. Corey digital computers.

Club members, in addition to boning up for the Graduate Record Examination, which paid off handsomely in grants for seniors, Dan Bryan, Larry Husch and Pat Sullivan, established a tutorial service. Proceeds from this service were used to rent two films, one on "Mathematical Induction," the other on "Integral Calculus." The textbook was better, members agreed. Moderator Brother Leo instructed members in the use of the transit and they practiced surveying the Heights Promenade which Brother Philip will buy sooner or later.

Campus Tones Wow Nurses

The Campus Tones toured the hospital circuit bringing their own particular brand of hand clappin' and foot stompin' to nursing school dances from St. Vincent's to Long Island College Hospital. This was no reflection on their music. The only thing sick about the group was its finances. There was a real lack of paying jobs due, most likely, to the fact that this was a re-organization year. Band leader Charlie Schretzman had his hands full just getting members to attend rehearsals.

The group contributed plenty of free music. The Campus Tones tooted and strummed at the Freshman Smoker, the Christmas Assembly, the Press Club Journalism Workshop, and the Project Peru Sunday Dance.

Morale increased proportionately to the increase in the number and quality of rehearsals when the group finally got a room to practice in. Between "Music Appreciation" classes and Glee Club sing-alongs the Campus Tones now swing out in the basement Music Room.

Sillion

When's Sillion coming out? Well, soon, in a few weeks, maybe, if we get some contributions perhaps, they said. Odd chaps those poets. No sense of time. Nevertheless, the arts magazine appeared, we think. Its first issue of the year was a splendid two hundred dollar extravaganza in the best tradition of Horizon and Show and it sparkled with all the literary and artistic luminescence of the St. Francis School: poetry by Joseph Gondek, Anthony Boyle; prose by J. T. Skerrett; ink drawings by John Perry, all moderated, fortunately in more than one way, by Professor J. F. Lacey. Editor Frank De Caro assured all that the fate of our literature lies with the creators of "little" magazines, "our intellectual marines," as Auden called them.

Triolet of Clubs

Brookhaven Revisited

Few weekly meetings of the Science Club went by without a film, a lecture or a guest speaker. Motion picture topics were as varied as the sciences themselves and ranged from films on fire and fuel to pharmaceuticals, to live birth, to a series on diseases. Club president Richard Hoenig spoke on the facilities of the Brookhaven National Laboratories, and James Tharrington discussed rocketry.

The principle speaker for the year was Mr. Norman Perry of the Argus Chemical Company who lectured on "Vinyl Technology." Student research projects were brought to fruition, and the results were published in the Phoenix, student science publication. Articles by Richard Hoenig, Lawrence Husch and James Tharrington, as well as one by Dr. Metz appeared. At the beginning of the year, the club made its annual trip to the Brookhaven Labs on Long Island, the mecca of all good science students everywhere.

Gaelic Society

St. Francis' sons of Erin enjoyed a fulfilling year. President Mike O'Connor proved a capable executive, and supplied his members with films ranging from the travelogue, "Invitation to Ireland," to the scholarly comparison of inland and coastal culture, "Galway." Brother Isidore of the Theology Department (and a Brooklynized Irishman) spoke on "Transplantation of Irish Culture to the United States."

Having done their homework all year, the members were ready to exhibit their Gaelic spirits on March 17th, as they led St. Francis' attack on the St. Patrick's Day Parade.

Sociology Club: Members Needed

Internal conflicts and the seeming reluctance of Sociology majors to join the club, handicapped operations, and the programs of President Nick Coladangelo time and again failed to succeed.

With the advice of moderator Dr. Jedrzejewski, the club at first projected to host a series of speakers on Metropolitan social problems. After encountering scheduling difficulties in this area, plans were made to publish a small sociological magazine. Failure of members to produce the promised articles caused this project also to collapse.

Besides the great satisfaction of doing a worthwhile job, St. Francis' men in Mexico enjoyed the lush, sub-tropical scenery of Valle de Bravo.

Terriers Travel

Encouraged by successful Summer work projects in the Mexican villages of Zinepecaro and Valle de Bravo in 1962 the Terrier peace corps, that nebulous, officerless organization known as St. Francis Students Abroad, scheduled a second expedition, this one to Peru. Dr. Ellis, Director of the Latin American Studies Program, flew down to South America during the inter-term recess to work out arrangements. Initial target for Summer 1963 was the slums of the city of Arequiba.

Greatest obstacle to overcome was lack of funds but money was solicited from a variety of sources. Students paid to watch faculty athletes stumble down the basketball court in a game against Project Peru hopefuls. The Brooklyn community was alerted to the needs of our little force. Raffles and dances garnered additional specie.

The isolationist faction of the lounge twitched more and more uneasily as the Summer grew nearer. We waited and watched, apprehensively, impatiently . . . for something to happen. It had to. We knew. Incredible things are going on in this wide, wide world of ours.

Half the fun is getting there. And getting there means raising money. Raising money means throwing a dance or two. Mark Thomas and guest in action.

BROTHER ANTHELM DROWNE, O.S.F.

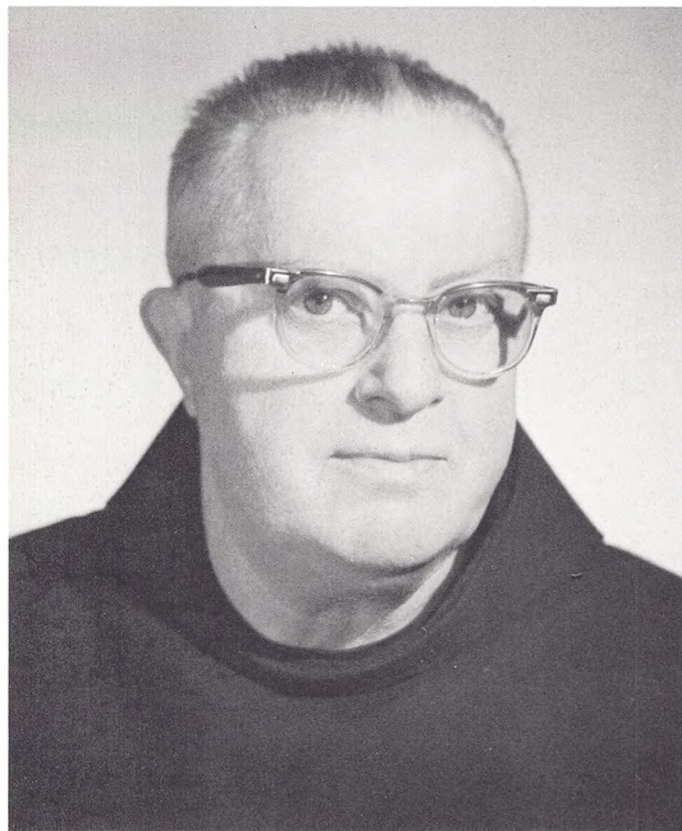

Librarian; B.A., St. Francis College; M.L.S., St. John's University.

The Library

Brother Anthelm's art of selectivity became a matter of choice rather than necessity this year. No longer hampered by limited shelf capacity, he and his staff were able to begin a gradual increase of the library to an expected 70,000 volumes from the present 35,000 volumes. The three-story building which opened in February includes a total of 300 seats in four main reading rooms. In addition, there is an audio room with eighteen tape recorders for language study and five phonographs with individual ear-phones for the collection of classical music. A special section houses the Brooklyn Historical Institute Collection with its growing Maritime Library.

Circulation headaches increased in proportion to the size of the library's enlarged operations. Consequently, library cards in the form of St. Francis College identification cards became necessary for the first time in the history of the College. A new staff member, Miss Rita Pascello, became circulation librarian.

Although all the equipment (including the brightly colored reading room furniture) and some of the procedures were new, some proven techniques were preserved. For instance, the task of reducing the vast collection of periodicals to microfilm was accelerated as an assurance that increased working space would continue to be used efficiently.

Division of Philosophy,

The reconstruction effort motivated the Division of Philosophy, Psychology and Theology. An attempt to facilitate the achievement of stated goals resulted in alteration of curriculum and personnel.

For the first time, the Philosophy Department offered a course in the "Philosophy of Communism" taught by Dr. Carpino. Mr. Slade remained at the Catholic University to complete his Doctoral work.

In the spring occurred a yet unexplained phenomenon . . . the registration of hordes of students for Mr. Farley's classes in "Formal Logic" which resulted in one of the most popular (and populous) courses offered at the college.

Father Hoehn brought a fresh point of view in his first term as a Theology instructor. Department Chairman Brother Isidore crossed Divisional lines to teach an education course in Methods of Teaching Religion.

Mr. Pallone ventured out of his offices in Jerome Hall to take over all the courses in Psychology although the eight credit course in "General Experimental Psychology" that had been planned was postponed due to lack of laboratory space.

Division of Growth, in personnel, in offerings, in techniques, enhanced the effect of the Humanities on the general life of the college. Various members of the Speech Department, for example, could often be sighted struggling through crowded halls with one or more tape-recorders which they transported from battle to battle in their way against the unpleasant aspects of "New York Regional Dialect."

Dr. Fox headed the English Department in the absence of Brother Giles who was on sabbatical at the Yale University School of Drama. Expansion in this department resulted in the addition of courses in "Literary Criticism" and "Advanced Writing" to the curriculum and Mr. Caricato and Mr. Quinn to the staff. Innovation continued in "Elements of Composition." Use of slides as visual aids proved so successful in teaching library techniques that their use was continued in the freshmen term-paper course.

The Department of Classical Languages undertook a total re-vamping of its program to include twenty-four credit hours of Latin and twelve of Greek. Mr. Glynn reached new heights of ubiquity by teaching a course in Vergil in addition to his duties as Placement Counselor.

The Departments of Foreign Languages and Fine Arts added a course and two instructors but the big news was the chef d'oeuvres of one of its long-time members. A year's study of Portuguese added to the offerings, tied in with the Latin American Studies Program. Messrs. Parlato and Dumbra were the new men on the faculty. Professor Fiorenza, in addition to his French Literature and Fine Arts classes, supplied the cultural event of the year by offering an evening of art song and lieder at Carnegie Recital Hall on January 29.

The Division

JAMES J. FLYNN

Professor of History; Chairman, Social Science Division;
B.A., Fordham University; M.A., Ibid.; Ph.D. Ibid.

The Division of Social Studies, under Chairman Dr. J. J. Flynn, inaugurated a number of new programs and broadened the scope of the old. The Latin American Studies Program became a major. The History and Economics Departments both increased their elective offerings. And the Education Department fully developed a course of study intended to prepare the student for state licensing.

Guest speakers added lustre to the course in "Current Problems in Eastern Europe and Asia." Speakers included Dr. Buscarello, author of Russian Foreign Policy, Indian Consul M. L. L. Mehrotra, Dr. Charles Transell, author of America Goes to War, and the Honorable Douglas Werton, American Vice-Consul at Yokohama. "Cultural and Social History of the United States," "Politics and Administration in Latin America," and Government and Business in America—1865 to the Present" made their first appearances in the catalogue this year.

of Social Studies

Professor Casey, in his first year as head of the Economics Department, added a profile study called the "Economics of American Enterprise" to the offerings in this field. Mr. Ford handled a full share of teaching chores while engaged in research on the demand for stainless steel.

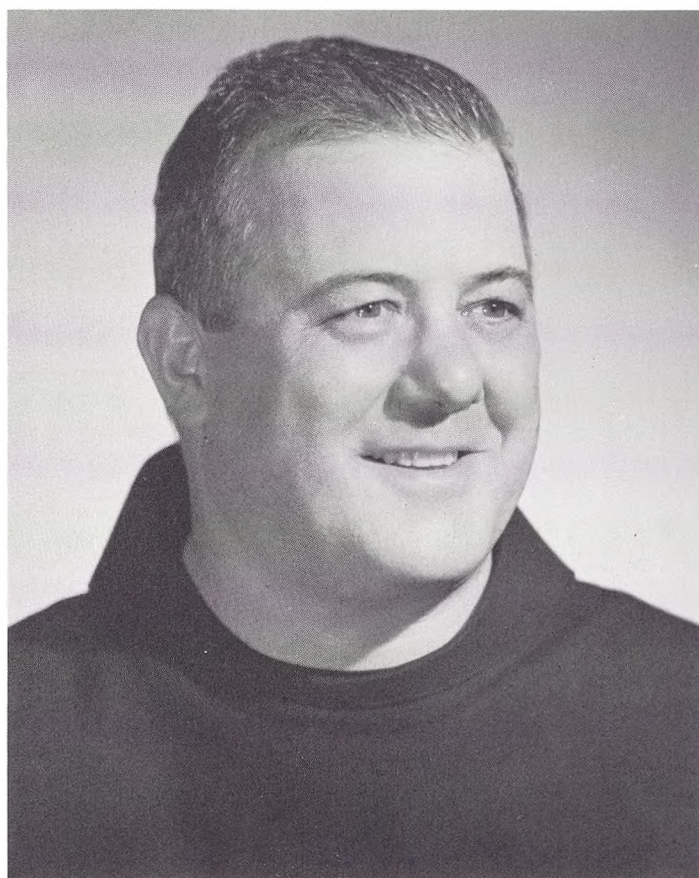

Dr. Clement Jedrzejewski attended the Fifth World Congress of Sociologists in Washington and presented his theory of Social Logic in several panel discussions. During his hours off from classes, Dr. Clement quietly prepared the manuscript of his soon-to-be-published book.

The Education Department under Brother Cosmas expanded its program to include all the courses required by the new state regulations regarding teacher training and licensing.

Associate Professor of Business Management, Chairman, Department of Business Management; B.A., Juniata College; M.S., Penn State University, Ph.D., University of Pennsylvania.

Consonant with the move of St. Francis to the center of Brooklyn's financial and business district, the Division of Business Administration found even closer ties with the business community. An accounting Internship Program, for example, enabled fourteen seniors to work with leading accounting firms. By attending the summer session, these seniors completed the fall term before Christmas vacation in order to secure an eight week leave of absence during which they experienced closely supervised staff work with the participating firms.

In order to assist the student in choosing his major field, the Management major was expanded and the curriculum re-arranged. A full year of Management is now offered to sophomores as a gauge of their aptitude for the major. "Marketing Management 302" and "Financial Management 403" were broadened to make more extensive use of scholarly business publications.

Professor Odendahl, new to the faculty, and Professors Savage and Schwartz attended the American Accounting Association's annual conclave at East Lansing, Michigan. At the Northeast Regional meeting of the same organization Professor Savage conducted a panel on "Accounting Research." All members of the accounting faculty participated in committee activities of the New York Society of Certified Public Accountants.

Division of Natural

Professor of Chemistry; Chairman, Division of Natural Sciences and Mathematics; B.A., St. Francis College; M.S., New York University; Ph.D., St. John's University.

After the Remsen Street move, the Butler Street campus was left almost entirely to the Division of Natural Science and Mathematics. While plans were formulated to install three or four new laboratories, lectures were given at both centers.

New plans brought new curricula and new teachers. Provision was made for adequate laboratory periods in "Biochemistry," and a supplementary lecture course in "Inorganic Chemistry" was introduced to provide students with a knowledge of recent developments in that field. Dr. Schneider was added to the Chemistry Department, Mr. Von Burg to the Biology Department.

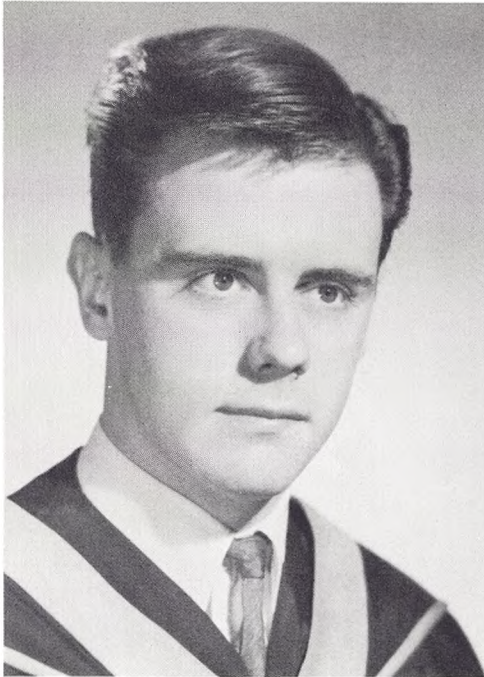

Dr. Metz took leave of his research at the Brookhaven National Laboratories and his classes in "Physical Chemistry" at St. Francis to represent the Atomic Energy Commission in Chile, where he aided scientists in Santiago to install a gamma irradiation facility. On the way back, he stopped off in Cape Canaveral to confer with scientists there, while Dr. Ballantine, a colleague from Brookhaven, stood in for him at the podium. At the same time, Divisional Chairman Dr. Burke worked with students Bob Costello and Fred Sneider on a National Science Foundation Grant research project dealing with the biologically active materials of dino-flagellate cultures.

Dr. McLaughlin of the Biology Department continued to assist the Office of Naval Research in its marine biology project. And Dr. Taschdjian, Department Head, addressed the February 1963 meeting of the Bio-Physical Society to deliver a paper on "The Effect of Veratrum Alkaloids on Elodea Cells and on Sedimentation of Carbon Suspensions."

Brother Leo and his colleagues added three new courses to the Mathematics offerings: "Linear Algebra," "Introduction to Modern Algebra," and "Vector Analysis." Another innovation was the use of teaching machines in "College Algebra."

"Pilgrim, your search is over." Dr. Taschdjian ponders the ramifications of the incipient move to Remsen Street.

"Just one snide remark and by the hair of my chinny chin chin . . ." Mr. Pallone, normally an orally aggressive person, in a muffled mood.

MISS DOROTHY JOEL
Psychometrist; B.A., Wellesley College.

Physical facilities now match the wide range of services provided by the Guidance Center. The entire seventh floor was converted to interview booths, assembly rooms and office space. Directed by Mr. Pallone and assisted by Mr. Glynn, the Center fulfilled every phase of psychological, educational and vocational testing and counseling from the Moody Aptitude Tests for Freshmen to the Graduate Record Examinations for Seniors.

Its staff already expanded by the addition of Miss Dorothy Joel, a psychometrist, and Mr. John Di Bernardo, a counselor, the Center took advantage of its increased capacity by extending office hours to 9:00 PM in order to accommodate evening students.

Besides providing assistance to students in uncovering and fulfilling their vocational aims and securing fellowships, the Center maintained a listing of temporary and permanent job opportunities. Mr. Egan's Placement Office arranged interviews for qualified students in careers in such fields as ghost-writing and chemical analysis as well as providing information on part-time employment in many varied fields from Youth Club supervision to department store sales.

Typical of the Guidance Center service to the community in general is its reading program. Speed reading with emphasis on rapid understanding of technical reports, market surveys and similar data was offered to junior and senior executives while remedial courses were offered to increase the reading skills of junior high school and high school students, college students and adults.

Like a good Fagan, Mr. Egan pauses contentedly, having placed another student on a job.

now it's Pepsi-for those who think young

Now parties are more informal, more fun. They reflect the new way of life everyone's leading. It's called thinking young. This is the life for Pepsi—light, bracing, clean-tasting Pepsi. So think young. Say "Pepsi, please!"
