building for September remained. Ed MacDonald, Bill Black and Mike O'Donnell graduated and only John Donovan would be returning. So, over the summer we built a team. Gene Westhoff was the new captain and John Rollino and Walter Godzich filled the other starting positions. Steve Dimino was for both teams a valuable and dependable back-up man.

In September, after a tough summer of work, we met Dickinson College and lost. Our team was good and no apologies or second thoughts are necessary. We played well against Dickinson, especially in the second half, but they beat us, went on to win five straight, and retired undefeated.

As I write this, Princeton is preparing to go on the show and is using our practice questions to get ready.

It's impossible to sum up all of the meanings for me or the team members of the chain of events that began on that cold February Friday. All in all, it was fun!

Acting as the political organization of the college, the IRC attempted to follow in the finest traditions of the two previous years. Guided by the executive board, the club sought to arouse political interest and insight for students in all divisions of the college.

This end was totally achieved by the select appearance of the Mayoral Candidates John Lindsay and William F. Buckley Jr. Representing Abraham Beame was Queens District Attorney Frank O'Connor. Overflowing and enthusiastic crowds were the order of the day for each of the above symposiums. To add to an already prosperous agenda of guests, was the arrival of Fr. Robert Graham, S.J., political expert on Vatican Diplomacy. It might be noted
