

Pi Alpha, the oldest fraternity at St. Francis, held its dogging festivities during the week of October 26th. One of the unforgettable routines was Dick Flynn's imitations in his makeshift T.V. set. Flynn ran the gamut from Marilyn Monroe to Fidel Castro. Pi Alpha initiated nine men following "hell night."

Bill Cahill displayed fine form during the tennis intramurals. Cahill was the outstanding participant during the program, playing in all scheduled events.

Ceremonies dedicating the Reverend Edward A. Moran Student Court were held on October 28th. Following a short talk, Father Moran blessed a statue of St. Francis overlooking the Court area. Father Moran is an alumnus of St. Francis College, and is pastor of St. Sebastian's, Woodside.

Unmoved by the nippy coolness of autumn, the students found time between classes to participate in the basketball intramurals. Three-man teams vied for intramural honors.

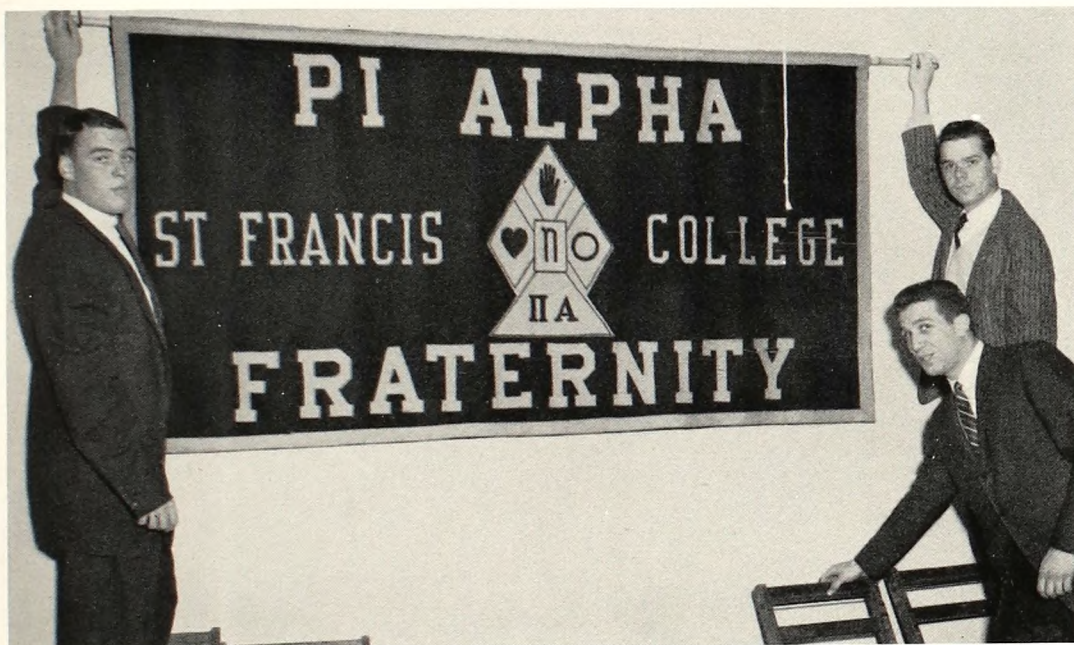

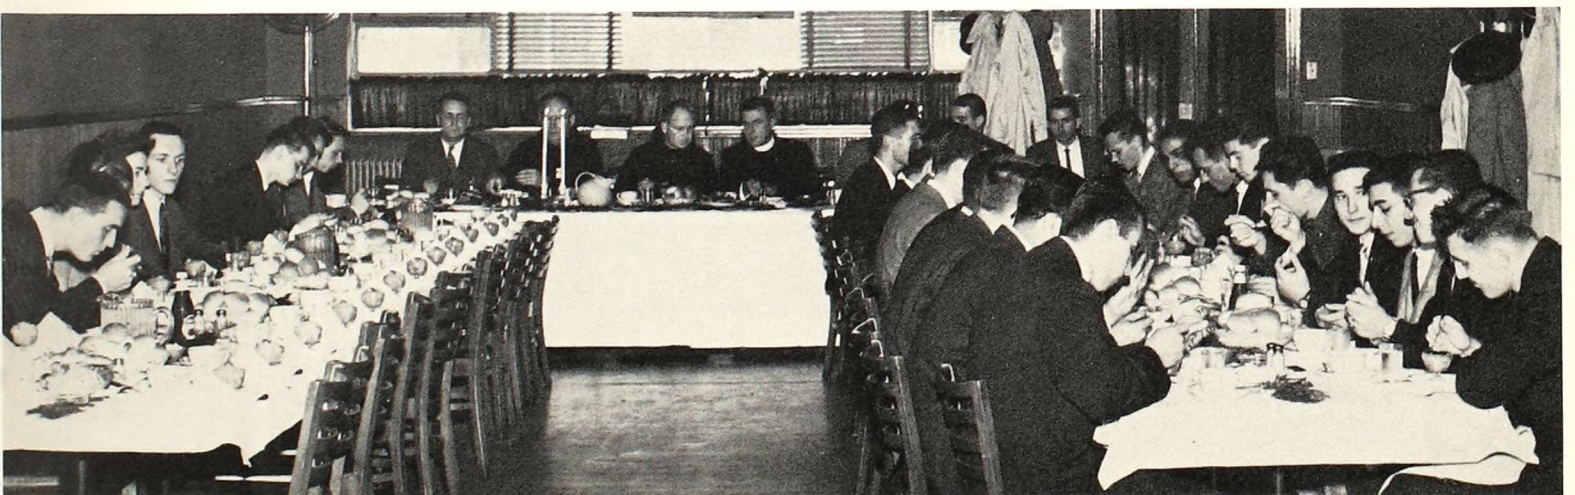

The Annual I.R.C. Political Symposium dealt with management-labor relations and problems. Representing the National Association of Manufacturers was Mr. Edward Maher.

Touch football became one of the most popular between-class activities during late October and November. Many students participated in the intramural program, others merely "chose sides" during free periods.

Pi Alpha obtained a frat house during the summer and, after renovation operations were completed, Archon John Meudt proudly hung the fraternity's banner with the aid of Pat Calhoun and Fred Schneider. The new house soon became a center for relaxation and study during school hours, and an ideal locale for holding socials.

The first student communion breakfast was sponsored by Phi Rho Pi on November 1st. Brother Pascal highlighted the affair with a talk on authority. Following in Phi Rho's footsteps, the Association of Evening Business Students, Pi Alpha and the Veterans Club held successful breakfasts in April.
