

President Doug Thompson thinks over query on the price of Business Club membership cards.

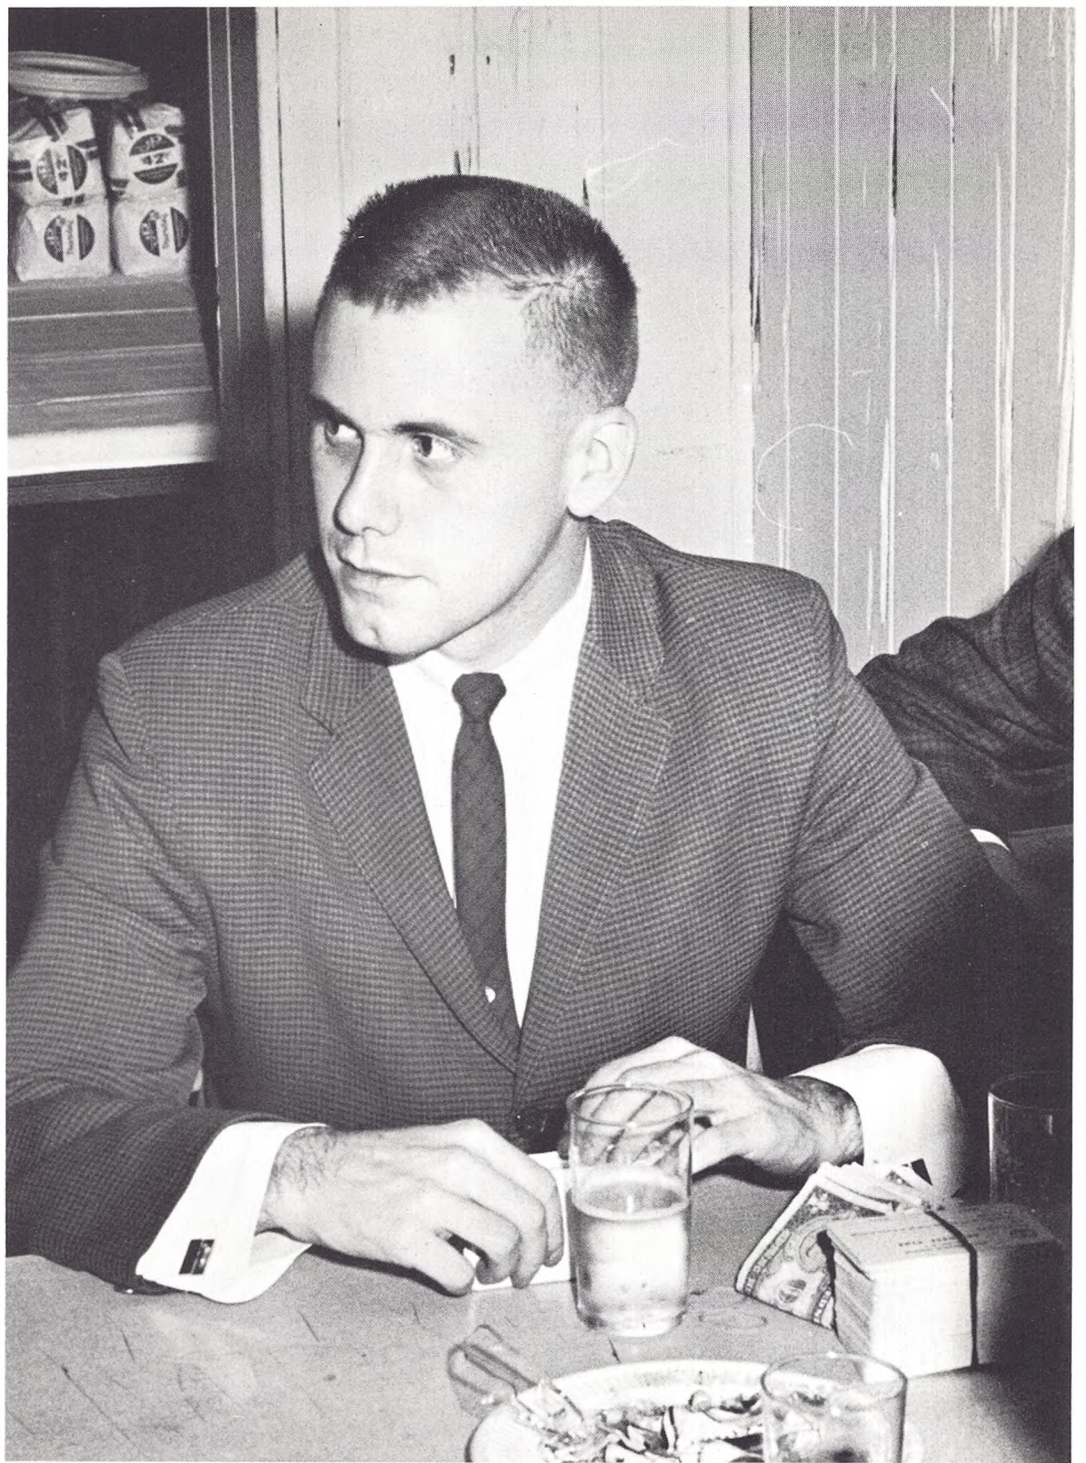

B. B. A's Sharpen Social Skills

In the bailiwick of the business executive, people are important. Future executives from St. Francis got a feel for working with people in both the social and business sense through activities of the Business Club. Members cooperated on social events and conducted discussions and lectures on career opportunities.

Under the direction of President Douglas Thompson, the club held a cocktail social at Kelly's Lounge. Highlight of the year was the Annual Dance at a New York hotel.

A speaker from Cities Service Company provided would-be Horatio Algers with tips on employment opportunities in the petroleum industry. In order to present a wider spectrum of interests, the club voted to affiliate with a national business fraternity. At this writing, negotiations are underway.

Al Myers argues a delicate point of legal procedure with interested fellow Club-member.

BUSINESS CLUB: Front Row: M. Jones, Doug Thompson, Phil Mercorella. Back Row: Rich Pinto, Bob Zuccano, Joe Cengia, Den Carlson, Arthur Toohig, John Cavallo, John Hurley, Ron Zabackoski.