

Gaelic Society

St. Francis' sons of Erin enjoyed a fulfilling year. President Mike O'Connor proved a capable executive, and supplied his members with films ranging from the travelogue, "Invitation to Ireland," to the scholarly comparison of inland and coastal culture, "Galway." Brother Isidore of the Theology Department (and a Brooklynized Irishman) spoke on "Transplantation of Irish Culture to the United States."

Having done their homework all year, the members were ready to exhibit their Gaelic spirits on March 17th, as they led St. Francis' attack on the St. Patrick's Day Parade.

Sociology Club: Members Needed

Internal conflicts and the seeming reluctance of Sociology majors to join the club, handicapped operations, and the programs of President Nick Coladangelo time and again failed to succeed.

With the advice of moderator Dr. Jedrzejewski, the club at first projected to host a series of speakers on Metropolitan social problems. After encountering scheduling difficulties in this area, plans were made to publish a small sociological magazine. Failure of members to produce the promised articles caused this project also to collapse.

SCIENCE CLUB. (above) Front Row: Jerry Hogan, Steve Wilantewicz, Richard Hoenig, Dennis Burke, Joseph Dettling. Back Row: James Clark, Richard DiBenedetto, Joseph Reilly, Frank Schmittner, Brother Howard, Ray Braguglia.

Gaelic Society. Front Row: John Hassett, Mike O'Connor, Bob Long. Back Row: Peter Clark, Thomas Raftery, Mike Henry, Phil Murray, Thomas Miskel, Leonard Florio, Bill Lovett.

Sociology Club. Front Row: Pat Walsh, Frank Acceteulli, Nick Coladangelo, Mike Graziano. Back Row: Arthur Hohmuth, Denis Franco, Bernard Loizzo, John DeBenedetto, Sal Ferraioli.

Protection from the sun included ten gallon hats worn by Joe Gargiulo, Anthony Lippold, and John Dalton. St. Francis men laid bricks for a bell tower and built a basketball court for Indian youngsters.

