A.A.U. and Eastern Champs

Coach of the year, Charlie Schaem, sets out for West Point with his bag of tricks.

Last spring, riding the first wave of enthusiasm in the East for a sport primarily popular on the West Coast, the Terrier water polo team captured the Junior National A.A.U. Championship as well as the Eastern Collegiate Water Polo Conference title. A string of 13 victories was the result of coach Charlie Schaem's policy of constant practice and fine team spirit and control in a rugged sport.

The season began with a doubleheader. The Terriers, led by co-captains Charlie Harris and Don McQuade first downed R.P.I. 9-1, and after a short rest handed a fresh M.I.T. squad a 17-13 defeat.

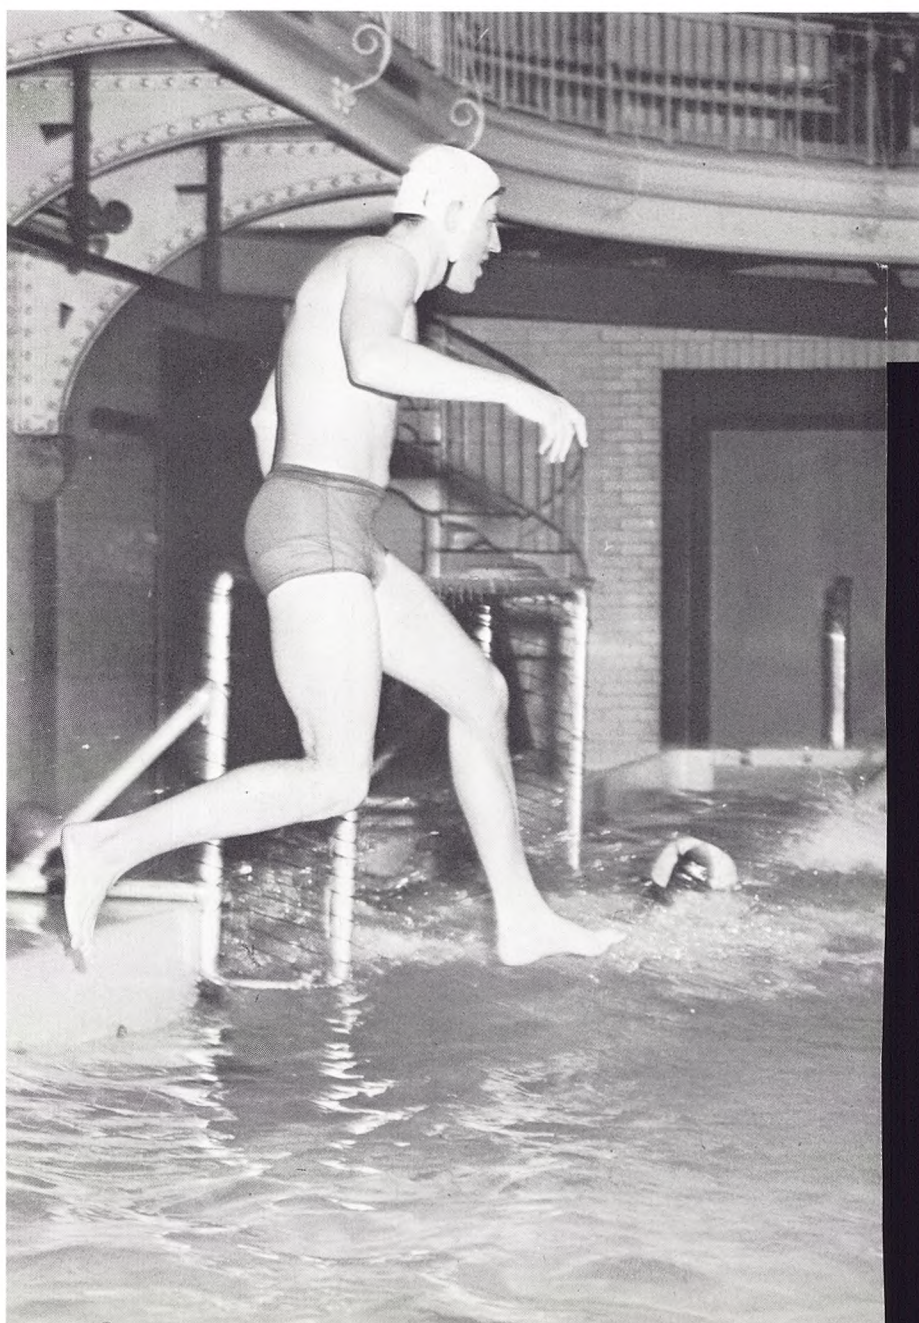

In rapid succession, the team recorded victories over Queens College, 17-7; St. Peter's, 17-3; and Brooklyn Polytech, 12-3. Veterans Larry Lynch and Frank Loughlin provided scoring punch in all three contests. Journeying to Boston to meet M.I.T. again, the Terrier waterpups defeated the Engineers, 11-3. Don McQuade sparked a wall-like defense, holding the opposition scoreless in the first half.

The undefeated Frankies next met a fine Cadet squad at West Point, and thanks to goalie Roger Pullis, who keystoneed the solid defense, put them down, 11-5. Yale alone remained an obstacle to the league championship and an undefeated season. A tight game in New Haven produced an 8-5 Terrier win. With a 7-0 record, St. Francis took the Eastern Collegiate Conference Championship.
