Of course, our job wasn't as tough as the trip out West back in the days of the '49'ers, but we did have partners in our task who gave us a helping hand when the "wagon got stuck in the mud".

We take our ten gallon hats off to soft spoken, easy going Joe Mahoney, our Moderator, who was always willing to point out the trail but refused to "ride herd" on us at any time.

The New City Printing Company Office will probably be a saner, more quiet office now that we are finished. To Frank and Fred and Dan and the whole gang our thanks for all their work and ideas.

Bill Welter of the Lorstan Studios did a mighty fine job in rounding up the Senior Class and the Underclassmen and branding us, photographically speaking.

Al Sfayer's office was always a good meeting place for the gang to map our plans out, and of course he took care of our saddle bags full of gold.

Our sincerest thanks goes to the "boys in the basement", for when it came to swapping tall tales or a little rustling on the side of supplies, the Athletic Office came in mighty handy. It took a good "cow-poke" to beat Joe Wielert, Bill McGuire, Danny Lynch and Co. at anything from coffee to addresses.

Our last but hardly the least of our thanks goes to the families of the staff for the numerous cold dinners they were forced to eat because of us, for the high phone bills we ran up, and for their patience of listening while we convinced ourselves over and over that the book would be a success.
