

DUNS SCOTUS

The Duns Scotus Honors Society was founded in 1935 and named after the Franciscan scholar John Duns Scotus. Induction into the Duns Scotus Honors Society is based on scholarly achievement, as well as participation in extra-curricular activities. Students inducted held a 3.7 cumulative GPA, are involved in at least two school sponsored activities and have been recommended by their professors. On April 28, 2006, the president of this year's chapter of Duns Scotus at St. Francis College, Alicia Blake, addressed the inductees as well as this year's guest speaker, Fred Siegel, author of "The Prince of the City: Giuliani, New York and the Genius of American Life." Ten members of the SFC community were inducted this year.
