A restaurant in the best continental tradition . . . unpretentious in everything except fine food, fine wines and liquors and service that is really polite.

ROCKWELL KENT writes: "This" I must once have said, speaking with my mouth full of your green noodles, "is the most divine dish in New York." I now do say, with the flavor of your noodles, divinely cooked (as per instructions) by me in Greenland, still lingering in my palate's memory, that, despite the praise of seal meat, slightly cooked, blubber raw, by the carnivorous epicurian, Stefanson, "your noodles doubtless surpass all foods that ever have been served to man or beast above the Arctic Circle." So, dear Signori, thanks!

Yours,

ROCKWELL KENT.
