Possessing an exceptionally keen mind whose specialty it is to single out incongruities in almost anything and then, proceeding to correct them, Bill is also a good student in History and English, the latter being his Major.

Bill has also shown great promise of being an excellent writer, as some of his themes show. Too, he is an untiring worker, loyal, and a good friend. Reaching everywhere, his charming personality readily cultivates friendships. . . .

Neil is a quiet, uncomplaining sort of fellow. Having returned to College after a "vacation" in the Army, he found that the only way he could graduate in as short a time as possible was to shift his major from History to Philosophy. This change did not phase him in the least, and he came through with flying colors. It is rumored that his key to success was the fact that he had plenty of time to study while commuting between Huntington, L. I. and Butler St., Brooklyn. Neil intends to enter into the export-import field after graduation, and we wish him luck, which he so richly deserves.
