

Psychology Fair

Over the last semester, students in different psychology classes were required to complete a psychological research project using skills they had learned throughout the year in their classes. After reading journal articles, and performing an experiment based on their own hypothesis the students then participated in the fair which was held on April 24, 2006. Members of the St. Francis community were invited to attend this fair and learn a little about research that was being done by fellow students at the college.

Leadership Conference

Leadership is perhaps one of the most important life skills anyone could ask to have. Our college experiences are filled with points where we have had to take the initiative and come through for others. The best place to sharpen our leadership skills on campus has been at the annual Leadership Conference which this year was organized by Student Activities. This year's participants spent the day in interactive workshops where they were able to learn about different aspects of what exactly leadership is and the most effective techniques to use when dealing with groups. Workshops ranged from important listening skills to how to plan an event to how to even increase energy in different clubs and activities.
