

The Division of

JAMES J. FLYNN

Professor of History; Chairman, Social Science Division; B.A., Fordham University; M.A., Ibid.; Ph.D. Ibid.

The Division of Social Studies aims to awaken in the student a clear realization of his true position in a Christian Democracy. The courses in the division are geared to develop a love of one's fellow man so that the student may participate in and work for the betterment of society; to acquaint him with a knowledge of our social and economic heritage which a study of the past provides as an interpretation of the present; to see always the working of Divine Providence and the exercise of man's free will in molding and shaping the destinies of men and nations; to understand the need of a clear sense of values in summing up the importance of the past in relation to current situations; to furnish him with a knowledge of the teachings of our heritage and their application to modern social and economic issues.

Majors offered in the division: Economics, History, Latin American Studies, Sociology, Social Studies—Secondary School Teacher Training and Social Studies in the Evening on a six year schedule.

Certain upper division courses within the division may be used for any one of the major fields with the permission of the Chairman.

Outstanding students who are majoring in Economics are eligible for membership in the National honor fraternity, Omicron Chi Epsilon. Majors in History who qualify are eligible for membership in the National honor fraternity, Phi Alpha Theta.

All Majors of the division must take an oral comprehensive examination and write a senior thesis to fulfill the requirements for a degree.

History Majors must prepare a senior thesis. The thesis is supervised both as to research and writing by members of the Department of History. The student, depending on his area of emphasis, will write a thesis either on Brooklyn history or problems of the Western Hemisphere. When writing on Brooklyn history, research will be done on original documents in various historical depositories that are available. For students in the Latin American Studies Program, a thesis will be completed on problems of the Western Hemisphere.
