JAMES J. FLYNN

Professor of History; Chairman, Social Studies Division; B.A., Fordham University; M.A., Ibid.; Ph.D., Ibid.

The Division of Social Studies aims to awaken in the student a clear realization of his true position in a Christian Democracy. The courses in the Division are geared to develop a love of one's fellow man so that the student may participate in and work for the betterment of society; to acquaint him with a knowledge of our social and economic heritage which the study of the past provides as an interpretation of the present; to see always the working of Divine Providence and the exercise of man's free will in molding the destinies of men and nations; to understand the need of a clear sense of values in summing up the importance of the past in relation to current situations; to furnish him with a knowledge of our heritage and its application to modern social and economic issues.

Majors offered in the Division: Economics, History, Latin American Studies, Political Science, Social Studies, Social Studies-Secondary School Teacher Training and Sociology.

All majors of the Division must take an oral comprehensive examination and write a senior thesis to fulfill the requirements for a degree.

History Majors must prepare a senior thesis. The thesis is supervised both as to research and writing by members of the Department of History. The student, depending on his area of emphasis, will write a thesis either on Brooklyn history or problems of the Western Hemisphere. When writing on Brooklyn history, research will be done on original documents in various historical depositories that are available. For students in the Latin American Studies Program, a thesis will be completed on problems of the Western Hemisphere.

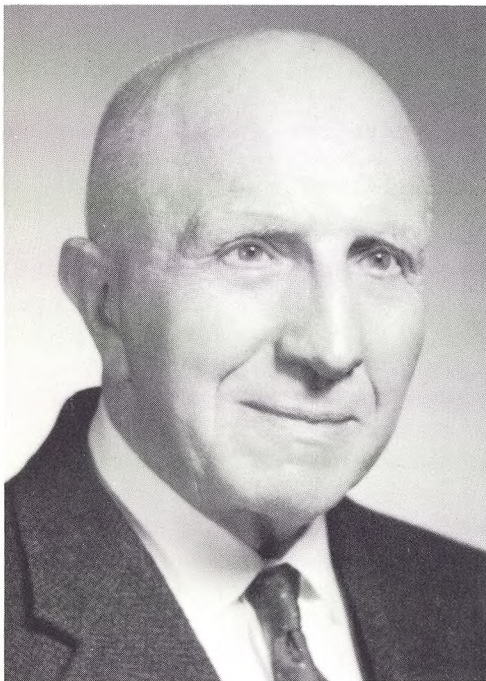

The Latin American Studies Program is a four year course leading to the degree of Bachelor of Arts with a major in Latin American Studies.

The student is required to supplement his area studies with intensive language study in Spanish and Portuguese. Organized around the basic liberal arts curriculum, the Latin
