

HUMANITIES CLUB: Front Row: Gerard DeStefano, Luke Colasuonno, Tom Swanzey, Robert Abrami. Back Row: James Duffield, Barry Kissane, Robert Sheehan, Charles Zeagers.

Luke Colasuonno in an existentialist mood after his talk on Albert Camus.

Officers of the Club: Nick Spaddacini and Mark Thomas.

Films Falters

mus, Brother Antoine on Faulkner and Joe Skerrett on Tennessee Williams balanced the presentations of Mr. Parlato of the Modern Languages Department and Mr. Quinn of the English Department.

Paintings, sculpture and drawings decked the library during the week of April first, as the Club's art exhibit brought Metropolitan collegiate artists into the limelight.

Continuing in successful fashion were the groups regular excursions to the Metropolitan Opera and to performances of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Brooklyn Academy of Music, conducted by Eric Leinsdorf.

Phi Rho Pi brothers at the Annual Communion Breakfast at Foffe's Restaurant. Front Row: Sal Ferraioli, Joe Durinick, Tom Raftery and guest, John Dalton, Bob Laria, Phil Fitzpatrick. Second Row: Bob Long, John Hassett, Bill Higgins, Jim Mannix. Third Row: Simon Pin Ho, Bob Allen, Dan Bryan, Mike O'Connor, Jim Jones. Back Row: Vic Battista, Gene Feldhaus, Dennis Burke, Wally Wood, Hugh McMenamin.

Phi Rho Pi is Forty

Founded in 1923 by a small group of St. Francis men who affiliated with a group from Manhattan College, Phi Rho Pi this year celebrated its fortieth anniversary.

Like all frats, Phi Rho Pi consists of a body of zanies who sometimes rise to the call of service. Light-hearted activities, of course, fulfill the prime function of the organization which is to foster the social life of its brothers. Social highlight of the year was the Fortieth Annual Ball held at the Hotel Diplomat. Pledges got a taste of the dog's life, as usual, except that dog-ging was held away from the College building. A slightly more subdued and reflective moment in the frenetic life of the fraternity occurred at the Communion Breakfast.

Opportunities for service arose and the brothers responded. Phi Rho Pi boasts that the Vice President of the Student Council, Editor of the Voice, President of the Glee Club, and President of the Gaelic Society are all members of the frat. Children in hospitals and orphanages benefited from Phi Rho Pi's Christmas Toy Drive.

During the band's intermission at the Annual Ball, high-spirited brothers sing the praises of the golden brew.

Three Scenes from hazing rituals: "Maury Wills" Laria ponders fate of the Mets should he die during dogging; it's a bird, it's a plane—no, it's a Phi Rho dog; "Manuel Yeaza" Allen takes pensive breather in torture proceedings.

"Mr. Russo, sir, you should choke."