

Student Elections

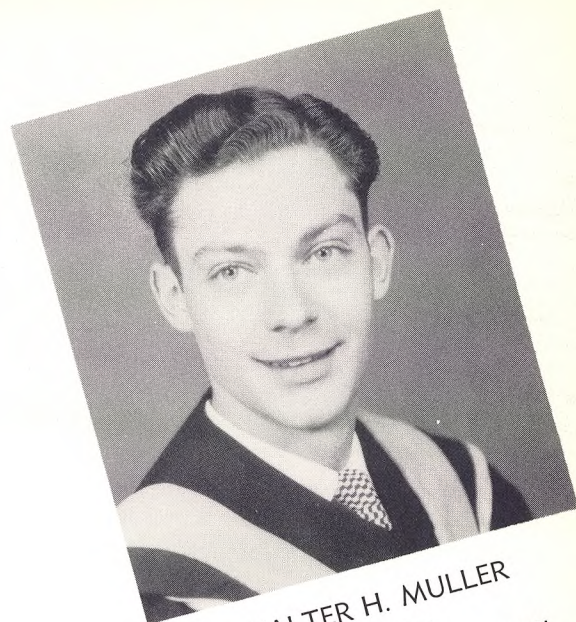

At St. Francis College we have a political life that is comparable to any place in the country. Smoke-filled rooms, caucuses, handshaking, and the other proverbial political tricks are very much present during the last days of the Spring Semester.

During these hectic days the students of the college exercise their privilege and franchise and vote for the election of the President of the Student Council and the Editor of the Voice. Every party and faction attempted to pick out a probable and popular candidate; each group tried to estimate the alignment of votes: for whom would the Frats vote; for whom would the important clubs vote.

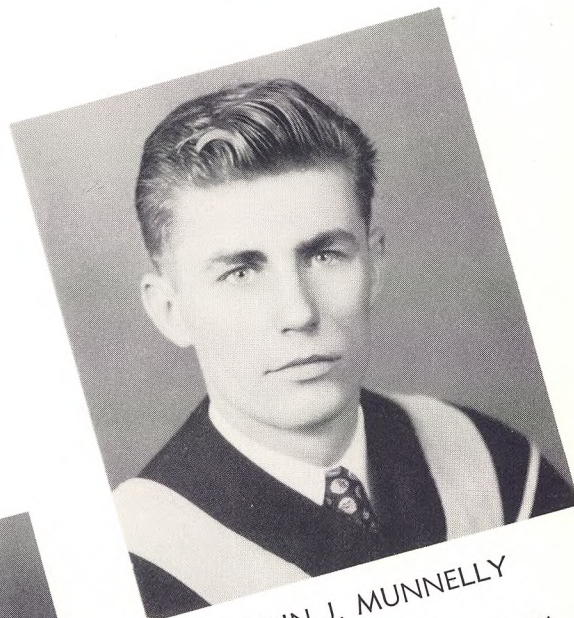

Party lines were tightly drawn, as each candidate made his campaign pledges. Bernard McQuillan and Ed McDonnell were the selections for the Presidency: John Curran, Joe Cowden, and Don Clancy were the choices for the Editorship.

Hand bills, impromptu speeches, back-slapping and other run-of-the mill techniques were employed to win that poll victory.

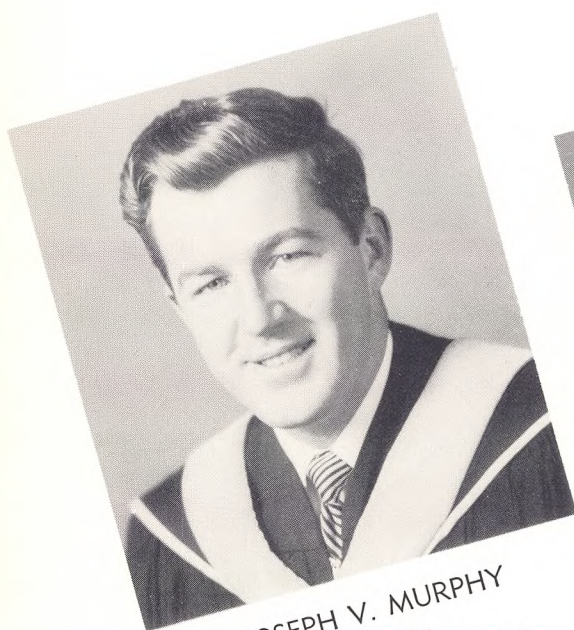

The results were: for the Presidency, Bernard McQuillan; for the editorship of the Voice, John Curran. Student elections were over at least for another year.

Intramurals

Intramurals are one of the favorite extracurricular activities at the college. Every student gets a chance to participate and show his ability along the line of athletics. The various clubs sponsor basketball teams, and frequently the student body sees a performance in the gym which looks like a college varsity game.

This year for the first time the Franciscan has entered a
