The Voice weathered another crisis this year. With the resignation of Ed Fox, Editor-in-Chief, the crisis assumed major proportions culminating in a hasty Student Council election. The election was won by news editor, Tom Raftery.

Although handicapped by his mid-semester election and the fact that The Voice has become a stepchild of the college, receiving ample abuse from both faculty and student body, Tom Raftery turned in a creditable performance, publishing several fine issues. In reorganizing the paper's format, he added a Student Council column, a column by Ken Murray, and columns by guest writers. Another new feature was "Campus Talk," a column by Bob Laria which was a series of answers to questions pertinent to the college.

Other staff changes included Bob Laria, Feature Editor; Ed Murphy, Sports Editor; and Rich DiBenedetto, Managing Editor.

The Student Council re-elected Tom Raftery as Editor-in-Chief for the 1964-65 school year.

Bob Long, Student Council columnist.

Hubert Stocker, Reporter.
