a single game. In a non-league game, Bill Trusellino also hit for 222, when the Terriers entertained the Princeton boys.

In February, when Bill Fitzgerald withdrew from college, Bill Tursellino succeeded him as Captain. The selection of "Turse" was a good one, for he finished the season with an average of better than 170, and was topped in this department only by Fitzgerald who had an 186 average at the end of 12 games.

The kegglers joined the other three major sports; basketball, baseball and track, in making the past year a memorable one in St. Francis sporting annals.

The cry of "Play Ball" in New Rochelle on April 3rd ushered in the baseball season for the Terriers of St. Francis. Entering into this, their second year at the diamond sport, the Franciscans hoped to improve on their record of last year.

Returning, last year, to the baseball wars for the first time since 1926, the Red and Blue's destiny was under the direction of Lew Malone. Lew is well known in baseball, having played in organized ball for a period of at least fifteen years. Lew's "big-time" playing was done for the Brooklyn Dodgers; he covered the keystone corner for "Dem Bums" prior to World War I.

The job before Lew was a strenuous one, for he had to give every man of the more than one hundred who reported a thorough looking-over.

There were no returning lettermen to build his team around. As far as Lew was concerned, all the boys were untried.

The schedule which was drawn up, considering that this was the first season, was a pretentious one. Listed as opponents for the 17 games, among others, were City College, Brooklyn College, Iona, Adelphi, Rutgers (Newark Branch), and the powerful Equitable Insurance nine.

Before the opening game, Gus Cammeyer, hard-hitting catcher, was named captain. Gus was but one of the four men representing St. Francis on the diamond who had worn the Red and Blue on the basketball court, also. The other three hoopsters were Hal Grady, Bill Paterno, and court captain Steve Ferraro.
