

World-famous Irish singer, songwriter, and storyteller Tommy Makem headlined an evening of Irish wit and music at St. Francis College on October 14, 1988 in celebration of the Dublin Millennium, the 1,000th birthday of the city of Dublin.

More than 500 students, alumni, and friends of the College enjoyed the show, which included folk tunes harkening back to the dismal days of the Irish experience, as well as new songs celebrating the Irish and Irish-Americans as a vibrant, creative people.

Also, performing was Dublin native Eugene Byrne, who sang traditional Irish folk songs.
