PRIMARILY a cultural group, the Classics Club has imbued St. Francis College with the glorious heritage of the past—something essential to every institution of learning. Endeavoring to create a sincere interest in the classics, the society sponsored a series of lectures in which the customs, traditions, and aesthetic qualities of the antiquities were discussed. Dedicating themselves to the appreciation and to the diffusion of the classics, the members of this society have shown amazing enterprise and energy in their search for the "good and the beautiful."
