Rudy is a Chem major and a good student. He is well liked by all of his classmates for his membership in the 100-0 Club, and he seems a cinch to be its next president. Rudy expects to go on with his chemistry, or enter medical school. All of his friends wish him luck with his future studies.

Dick, an aspiring pre-sem student majoring in philosophy, joined St. Francis in 1945. He is a jolly and energetic fellow. His greatest weaknesses Tchaikowsky's fifth symphony, along with scungili and wine at Sam's. Likes most to follow the basketball team, cheering with his cowbell. Just ask Dick how much he likes riding on the Brighton Line getting to his eight o'clock classes. Possessing the characteristics of a true Franciscan, Dick, is sure to succeed in his endeavor.

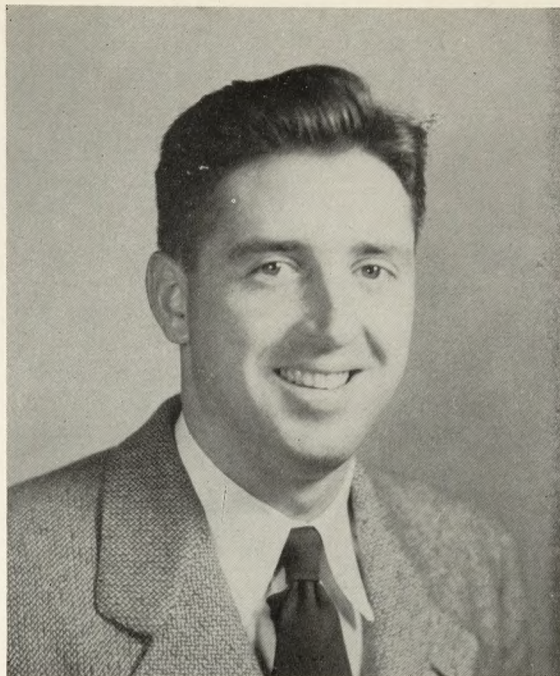

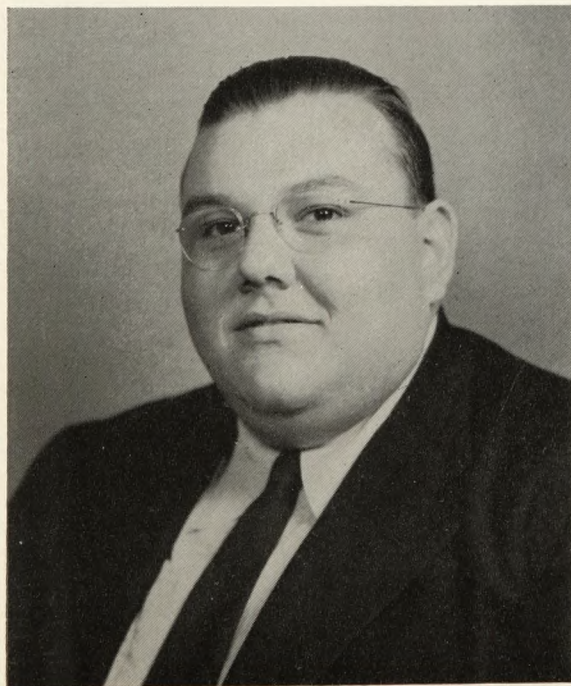

FRANCIS GIORDANO

Pres. Philosophy Club; Third Order; Sodality; To Kalon K' Agathon; History Club.

Frank, or "Luke" as he is often called, is big, not only in size but, in his devotion and activity for St. Francis College. It was through his efforts that the Philosophy Club became a very active unit, as well as a profitable one. Luke is a pre-sem student and bears the respect of all his friends and professors. It is our sincere hope that he will one day attain the noble goal for which he aspires for he will be a credit to his Church as he is a credit to his school.

VINCENT GORMLEY

*Army
Power Memorial; Columbia University
Math Club; Senior Class Treasurer*

Here's the sort of fellow who blushes and stutters when giving a speech, but that's only because he's in front of a lot of people. There's no bashfulness in Vinny outside the classroom. He always has a humorous answer in conversation as "Say Vin, do you do the math?" and Vin answers with a playful "know any more jokes?" Truthfully, now, Vin is one of the most honest and sincere students in the college halls.

Name a sport or suggest a game and you'll find Vin interested. He's developed a deadly left-handed hook shot in our class basketball; plays for the Math Club.

Looking ahead, Vin hopes to enter medical school.
