What's that? You say so what if I'm finishing my sophomore year, what does that mean? Well, pull up a beer case and sit down and let me tell you what it means to be finishing up your sophomore year at Saint Francis College.

On the surface it may appear to mean that I have acquired sixty-four credits which entitles me to half a degree, the back half, not a small accomplishment at that, but beneath the surface it means much more.

Sure we had to struggle to comprehend the mysteries of the molecule and to change our "erstes" to oysters, but that's all in a days work in college. There are many things which stand out in a college year and we've had our share. We remember being bombarded with tomatoes and eggs by the rebellious Frosh who couldn't seem to realize that we were the ones who were supposed to give the 'hazing'. We also remember the wonderful time we had at the Soph-Frosh-Hop, the first social event of the year. We remember most of the good times, and we hope we can forget the many nights when we had to burn the midnight oil to cram for exams.

We have arrived. We find ourselves at the half-century mark halfway through our college careers, about to become real upper-classmen. Now we are beginning to plan the courses in our major field, struggling with chemical equations, economic principles, and wondering why metaphysics is a required course.

We hope our next two years will be as wonderful as our first two and we pray to God for success in our studies and guidance in becoming true Franciscans.
