At last, we are here. The long road of textbooks, pencils and lectures are finally over. It is time to rejoice. Graduation is a day of celebration. It is one of the most exciting, as well as, the most relieving event in a graduate's life. Graduation is the successful completion of a goal that brings closure and fulfillment. With it comes, the drive and the demand of personal excellence. All our sacrifices throughout the years can now be rewarded.

Remember not to forget what we learned from St. Francis College because this institution is just the beginning. The professors were added bonuses to our lives. Their mission was to open our minds to the different aspects of the world. Their exams, though, painful served as a tool to solidify the information, some so painstakingly etched into our souls. The skills, techniques and critical thinking, we take from here are to prepare us for what the workforce as well as the world has in store for us.

I truly hope that you could look back upon your memories (good and bad) in St. Francis with pride and joy. There is no question that we all have studied long and hard. Now it is time to move on to a new chapter in our lives. The Franciscan community has done their part in leading us through a path of higher learning and it is up to us to continue on our own path.

We are the graduating class of 1998. We intend to accept the responsibilities and challenges the world has to offer. We reached this far and there is no stopping us. Ladies and Gentlemen, I bid you good and many successes.
