

to Manhattan and it was during this game that the St. Francis team displayed their very worst brand of ball. Nothing went right, the passing was sloppy, the board work was lax and the whole game was terrible. Needless to say Manhattan won, handing the Terriers their worst defeat up to that time, the score-board showing the Jaspers a 48-41 victor at the final gun. The one consoling fact of this game was the sixteen points dropped in by Tommy Gallagher. By netting this amount Tommy reached the 200 point mark for the season.

Two nights later found the Terriers in the "Garden State of America" (New Jersey), where Awaking the next A.M. the Franciscans were taken on a "joy-ride" by an army chauffeur driving an army bus, when they were driven from the camp to Philadelphia. The cause of visiting the "City of Brotherly Love" was to meet La Salle College in Convention Hall. This game saw the boys outdo themselves, and as a matter of fact outplay and outscore the highly-favored Philadelphians. That is, up to the last few seconds of play when Tommy Gallagher fouled "big" Larry Faust in the act of shooting. With but seconds to go Faust put in the tying and winning points. So again the Terriers had lost a heart breaker, this time by one point; 53-52. Captain Emil Mele regained his scoring punch in this game and led the team by accounting for 18 markers.

Returning home Sunday afternoon the team didn't stay long, for on Tuesday they could be seen boarding the "Advance Knickerbocker" for the journey up to Albany. This was to be the second half of the home-and-home series with Siena College. The game was played in the Washington Street Armory in the State Capitol.
