A freshman, tentatively I
Approached the portels, meek and shy.
Oh would my soul at length arise
To be a senior, worldly wise?
Four years slipped by, oh golly, where?
I face the world, not debonair.
I face the world quite meek and shy;
The me inside is still just I.

Gone forever is yesterday
To rest quietly in the past;
Gone forever, slipped away,
Like the ones before it passed.
Gone forever is yesterday.
Vanished with the night;
Never more to be returned
Except in memory's light.
