

N.F.C.C.S. STALLS

Club members plan for the survival of their steadily dwindling membership.

On December 15, 1964, the student council removed the National Federation of Catholic College Students as a representative body. The reasons were the lack of concern on the part of the student body and too high a budget.

In past years the N.F.C.C.S. has been one of the most active organizations at St. Francis. It was perhaps the most driving national organization which St. Francis had. There was an abundance of active students with a great concern to make our college a leader among the other member schools. This year the N.F.C.C.S., an organization which claimed every student as a member, found itself with only two or three students willing to work for it. In the beginning of the year senior Ken Wheeler found that he had too many commitments to act as the college's leading delegate. He turned the leadership over to the student council representative, Gene Swanzey. Just after Swanzey took over, he found himself and his organization being questioned by the council.

The fate of the N.F.C.C.S., working either outside of the council or under the council's control, is yet to be decided.

CAMPUS TONES

The Campus Tones in action at a special assembly in the St. George Hotel.

An influx of new undergraduate activity brought new life to the 'Campus Tones'. Informal sessions in the lounge were a new and noisy experience that met with both approving and disapproving comments. The music provided at the school functions demonstrated new additions to an already familiar repertoire.

Al Lambert, vocalist for the band.
